MRS. KATHERINE W. MEALEY.

Mrs. Katherine K. Mealey, a Brookline housekeeper, was held in $10,000 bail in the district court today for the shooting of her husband, Frank H. Mealey, former Boston policeman and war veteran, following a quarrel at the home of Albert C. Place in Brookline Saturday.

Mealey is at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital on the danger list. He has three bullet wounds inflicted by his wife.

Shock and Cerebral Hemorrhage Given as Cause; Victim Only 19

Mrs. Helena Gonsalves, nineteen-year-old bride, was found dead today under the dining room table of her home near the State road in the town of Burlington.

The body was discovered by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Cinhiero, who was roused from bed by sounds from the dining room.

Investigation of the mystery surrounding Mrs. Gonsalves' death was immediately begun. Medical Examiner Roscoe D. Perley of Melrose was notified. Dr. Perley said the bride died from shock and cerebral hemorrhage.

There was no explanation at hand, however, whether the bride had been under any unusual mental or physical stress, other than the fact she had been subject to attacks of fainting. Dr. Perley said:

"Death was due to shock; cerebral

Ex-Kaiser's Bride To Take Title, "Queen of Prussia"

Doorn, Holland, Oct. 9 (By the Associated Press). — The bride of former Emperor William, the Princess of Reuss, will assume the title "Queen Wilhelmina of Prussia," according to an announcement made today during a preliminary reception to friends of the bride and groom at the castle here.

BAY STATE TO TEST NEW MATERNITY LAW

Washington, Oct. 9.—Massachusetts' request for permission to test the constitutionality of the Federal maternity law was granted today by the Supreme Court and the process ordered returned on January 2, 1923.

Massachusetts attacked the law on the ground that it "usurped" authority belonging to the States and established a system of government "whereby certain governmental functions are performed by coöperation between the Federal government and said States," from which Massachusetts is excluded by reason of its assertion of its sovereign rights.

Mayor Proposes $350,000 as Compromise Price in Drive for Single Fare

As part of his fight to secure a single fare for residents of Hyde Park and Readville, Mayor Curley today proposed to the Boston Elevated that it buy the Hyde Park franchise and property from the Eastern Massachusetts for $350,000.

The proposal came during a conference in the Mayor's office. Trustees of both roads were present, together with Corporation Counsel A. Mark Sullivan. The two roads will try to come to some settlement on the basis of the Mayor's proposal.

The Eastern Massachusetts took the stand that $600,000 was set as the valuation of the property and franchise in 1916 and this figure was accepted by the Public Service Commission. It is regarded as exorbitant by the Elevated. It is understood, however, that the former road is ready to compromise.

The fact that residents in Hyde Park and Readville are required to Dublin, Oct. 9.—The possibility of conscription in Ireland is considered in some quarters to have been forecast by Richard Mulcahy, the commander-in-chief, in the course of a speech to a division of the troops at Gormanstown.

"We in the Irish army look forward to our being a big national organisation through which the young manhood of Ireland will pass for a brief space of time, and they will pass out much better men and better citizens," he said.

BRITISH BLOW UP BRIDGES IN PREPARING FOR TURKISH ATTACK

KEMALIST ARMY REPORTED AGAIN ON WARPATH

sumed their advance in the Dardanelles area in the direction of Chanak, the British stronghold, according to a Mudania dispatch to the local newspapers.

It was reported during the night that Turkish irregulars had appeared a short distance from Beikos in the hills on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus.

Turkish irregulars and small bands of guerrillas and bandits, which frequently form the advance guard of a Turkish army, have appeared in small villages east of Constantinople.

These villages include Tashkeupsu, Tavshanjik, Omarli, Agfa and Armudli, all within the suburban limits of Constantinople on the Asiatic side.

The British yesterday made final preparations for defence, blowing up bridges and crossroads.

A British destroyer anchored Sunday at Shile on the Black Sea coast. The commander went ashore, met the Nationalist officer there and requested him to withdraw his forces. Te Turk replied that he has orders to remain, whereupon the British commander declared he also would remain, and kept to his anchorage close inshore.

Turks on Warpath Despite Ultimatum

British Chief Threatens Military Demonstration

London, Oct. 9. (By the Associated Press).—The Mudania conference is being resumed under the new instructions framed at the Paris meeting, to insist upon fixation of the number of Turkish gendarmerie to be allowed in Thrace, withdrawal of all Turkish troops from the neutral zones, and delay in the occupation of Thrace by the Turkish army until the signing of a peace treaty.

General Harington is reported to have warned Ismet Pasha that unless the Kemalists withdraw from the neutral zone he may be obliged to make a military demonstration on the Turkish flanks. The Kemalist representative is said to have promised that the advance shall cease, and that the incident will not be repeated.

Greek Reactionaries Warned by Gonatas

Athens, Oct. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Attempts by reactionaries to make capital out of the loss of Thrace will be met, if necessary, by force, it is declared by Colonel Gonatas, military dictator of the new Greek government.

The revolution, achieved peacefully, he said, came too late to save Thrace.

"But it came early enough," he added, "to prevent a greater disaster. The pretentions of the enemy will not be limited by the line of the Maritza River." (The Maritza River marks the western boundary of that portion of Thrace the allies have agreed to return to the Turks.)

WHO IS THIS GIRL OF DUAL PERSONALITY?

"MISS JEKYLL-HYDE."

GIRL'S IDENTITY BIG PUZZLE TO POLICE

Who is this girl?

It is the first picture of the mystery patient at the City Hospital that has been printed since she was picked up, dazed from cocaine, at Roxbury recently. A week before she had been found unconscious in a Franklin street doorway. She was suffering from drugs on that occasion, too, and was released from the Relief Hospital a little more than twenty-four hours before she came to grief in Roxbury.

Shortly after she recovered consciousness at the City Hospital she revealed a strange duality of identity. One moment she would act and talk like a refined, educated girl. Then, without warning, she would lapse to the mannerisms and argot of a gangster's sweetheart.

On the register of the hospital she is named Bernice Waldron.

Do you know who she is?

hemorrhage. There was no sign of foul play. The girl had fainting spells before.

"When she went to bed at 10 o'clock the night before she was in good health. She got up three hours later. She probably had a weak spell and fell, then groped around on her hands and knees until she was under the table. There were no signs or marks on the body."

HUSBAND WAS AWAY.

The girl's husband, Frank R. Gonsalves, lives in Belmont street, Woburn, weekdays, in order to be near his work. He has made no request for an autopsy.

Mr. and Mrs. Gonsalves had been married a little more than a year and had an infant daughter. The only other occupant of the house last night besides the grandmother, the young mother and baby girl, was an uncle of the bride.

DELISLE IS NAMED LOWELL POSTMASTER

Lowell, Oct. 9.—Xavier A. Delisle, temporary postmaster at Lowell, has been named as permanent postmaster, according to unofficial information from Washington. Delisle is one of several condidates for the position, others being Mrs. Mary Walsh Brennan, an attorney; Perry D. Thompson, four-years Mayor of Lowell, Davis Gillis, veteran letter carrier and Tyler A. Stevens, member of the Lowell Budget Commission.

Examinations were taken in August and much dissatisfaction has been shown over the delay in announcing the appointee. Several letters were written to Washington asking for "more speed" in naming the postmaster.

SMYRNA RELIEF SHIP TO LEAVE PHILLY

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—The Sangus, the first relief ship from Philadelphia to carry food and medical supplies to the devastated regions of Smyrna and the Near East, will sail Wednesday. Local flour mills worked all day to prevent the delay of the sailing. The cargo will be worth approximately $185,000, toward which Philadelphians contributed $30,000.

The cargo will be distributed chiefly to orphanages which, according to G. E. Silloway, regional director of the Near East Relief, have a total of 7 000 inmates.

GREEK ARMY IN THRACE READY FOR BATTLE

Adrianople, Oct 9 (By the Associated Press).—General Anastasios Leonardopoulos, new Greek commander in Eastern Thrace, was greeted by the populace and soldiery as "the liberator of Adrianople," upon his arrival here yesterday.

The title "liberator," arises from the fact that he was the first Greek to enter Adrianople after the Bulgarians and Turks were driven from the city in 1918.

At this moment it is evident that the army has little intention of evacuating Thrace without a struggle, whatever the orders from Athens may be, and there is no doubt many of the officers are looking back for inspiration to the examples of Gabriele d'Annunzio at Fiume and General Zeligouski at Vilna.

General Leonardopoulos received the Associated Press correspondent, and in reply to the question whether Thrace was going to fight, said, speaking in French:

"We are prepared. The whole army asks nothing better than the opportunity. We shall not surrender Thrace. Anyone who saw the soldiers along the Rue Karatch today knows instictively that my words reflect absolutely the spirit of the troops.

"We are one in an inflexible determination to keep intact the new Greece. No difference of opinion exists on the question. The Turks may think we are beaten, but let them try to prove it on the soil of Thrace."

GARLAND HOME LIFE WRECKED; FORTUNE GONE

Most of his fortune gone, Charles Garland, eccentric citizen of a strange land of dreams and ideals, faces with equaninity the wreckage of his home life.

The relations between the founder of the American Fund for Public Service and his wife have been but thinly maintained. Mrs. Mary Wrenn Garland is at Dedham. Garland is at Middleboro. Mrs. Garland appears convinced no reconciliation is possible. It was hoped by her their recently born baby would bring Garland down from the clouds to a realization of his domestic responsibilities. She has apparently given up that hope.

On October 16 Mrs. Garland will leave Dedham for a tour of Europe. She was to be accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Philip Wrenn; her sister, Miss Margaret Wrenn, and her two children, Margaret and Peter. They will be gone a year. In that year Garland will remain here and watch how the American Fund for Public Service, which he founded with the larger part of his fortune, distributes the large sum he donated.

Garland made it clear that he has been in occasional communication with Mrs. Garland about important domestic matters; that his relations with her are friendly, but not too friendly, and that he is very much satisfied with the status quo.

To Tour Europe

CONSTANTINE PLANS TO VISIT PARIS

There appeared before the court Bridget McGinn, the housekeeper, who discovered the bodies of the chauffeur and housemaid; Helen Gorman, the parlormaid, and William Elkins, the gardener. The latter two were members of the party which preceded the mysterious death of Devine and the Zeisloft girl.

All four were held as material witnesses, in surety of $100 each, which was furnished by Miss Sinkler. She announced she would go to Philadelphia tomorrow, accompanied by the servants, but would return Monday.

The police are working on two theories.

One is that the handsome chauffeur and the pretty housemaid, their romance in some unknown manner blasted, carried out a suicide pact.

Another—and the one which is regarded as more probable—is that Stella Zeisloft, crazed by a love that could not find fulfillment, enacted the role of a modern Lucretia Borgia and poisoned her lover to cheat his bride-to-be.

In support of the latter theory, the American has gathered these facts:

A year ago Devine and Miss Zeisloft, both in the employ of Miss Caroline Sinkler of Philadelphia, at her Summer home here in Eastern Point, were known to be keeping company. Stella never took pains to disguise the fact that she was madly in love with Harry? who was ten years her junior. She was 32, he 22.

DEATH SEALS SECRET.

Just about the time that their friends expected to hear the announcement of their marriage, Devine announced his engagement to a Philadelphia girl. He said he expected to marry her during this week.

There was a farewell party. Stella showed no great chagrin. In fact she purchased a sweater which she gave to Devine, for his bride. It was her wedding gift.

The party was held in the kitchen of the Sinkler estate. Four people attended. Two left. Devine and Stella Zeisloft remained. The two who left did not show and have not shown any ill effects from the booze they drank.

The seal of death is upon what followed.

When Bridget McGinn, Miss Sinkler's housekeeper, woke up at 6:20 o'clock yesterday morning to summon Devine and the maids to mass, she found the bodies of Devine and the Zeisloft girl.

It was nearly an hour later that the police were summoned.

They found the chauffeur and the housemaid propped up in chairs.

It became known later that when Bridget McGinn found the bodies they were locked in each other's arms, prostrate on the floor of the kitchen.

The police found the bodies fully dressed.

They were not fully dressed when Bridget McGinn cast her horror-stricken eyes on them.

What happened between the time, at 10:30 Sunday night, when Helen Gorman, the parlormaid, and William Elkins, the gardener, the other members of the party, left, and 6:20 Monday morning, when Bridget came upon the bodies of Harry and Stella, partly unclad and held in the stiff embrace of death?

Did they have one last drink after the parlormaid and the gardener said good-night?

Did Stella Zeisloft, visioning the unbearable picture of the man she loved marrying another woman, put something into that last drink—into his glass, and into her own?

This point will be established when an anlysis is made of the contents of the stomachs of the two bodies. The internal organs have been sent to Dr. Boos of Harvard Medical School.

The authorities at work on the case are proceeding with the utmost secrecy.

Bridget McGinn, William Elkins and Helen Gorman were today taken to police headquarters and questioned. The police refused to give out any information concerning what they discovered.

City Marshal Whidden left for Lawrence. He declined to say what he was going for, but it was learned he had gone to consult District Attorney Donnell.

SURE CRIME COMMITTED.

Mr. Donnell is certain that a crime was committed.

"I will not stop with the report made by the police," he said. "I am going to see this thing through. It is one of the most remarkable cases that have ever come to my attention."

From the district attorney's remarks, it is believed that he may think it possible both were slain by some third person. The police are inclined to think either that they died as a result of a suicide pact, or that one of them poisoned the other and then consumed the remainder of the poison.

Back of the double tragedy lay Devine's forthcoming marriage to the Philadelphia girl. Miss Sinkler was shortly to close her place here for the season, and on the return to Philadelphia the chauffeur was to get married.

Miss Zeisloft, it is thought, was infatuated with him. Their acquaintances declare that the two never seemed to be more than casual friends, although they had been acquainted for years; but other reports say that the two had been in love for some time.

Devine and the maid were lying on the floor by a table. On the table was a quart bottle of whiskey, from which about a half-pint was gone. Several glasses—one report says two, another says five—were beside it, all of which bore dregs of whiskey in the bottom. Nearby stood utensils that had apparently been used to heat water in. A couple of bottles of ginger ale are said to have been on the floor.

Conflicting stories told by the other servants make it diffcult to get at the real truth of the story of events preceeding the tragedy.

From all that can be learned, however, a sort of farewell party was held during the evening.

Devine, Miss Zeisloft, a gardener named William Elkins and another maid named Helen Gorman took the auto and drove downtown early in the evening. According to one report, they were accompanied by another man, but who this man was cannot be learned.

Acording to Elkins, they went first to a theatre, where they stayed some time. Then they came out and went to a restaurant for some supper. After this they started home, stopping at a house where Devine bought a bottle of whiskey.

Returning to the kitchen, they opened the whiskey and "had a few drinks." Some water was heated and mixed with the whiskey for the women, and it is thought that some ginger ale was added in one or two cases. The fifth person, who is said to have gone on the party, is also said to have had a drink in the kitchen and then left.

BLUENOSE GAINS THOUGH LAST AT THE START

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 9.—Bluenose, International Fishermen's sailing champion and winner Saturday of the first of the elimination races arranged for selection of the Nova Scotia defender to meet the American challenger off Gloucester, Mass., this month, was the last of the four entries to cross the starting line in the second race today.

Mahaska crossed at 10:00:54; Margaret K. Smith at 10:01:03; Canadia at 10:01:25, and Bluenose at 10:01:31.

Fifteen minutes after the start, however, Bluenose had worked up into third position, overtaking Canadia. The Smith had snatched the led from Mahaska. The wind was freshening.

Course signals called for five legs, over forty miles—down the harbor, around a triangle, and back into the harbor.

If Bluenose should capture today's contest, the elimination trials will be over. She ruled the favorite along the waterfront.

Bluenose was n second place at the first mark, turning at 11:27:51. The other times were: Smith, 11:23:40; Mahaska, 11:30:49, and Canadia, 11:34:30.

800 in Steerage Held on Liner Arabic

FEAR THAT QUOTA IS EXCEDED

Washington Wired for Instructions; Other Passengers, Including Notables, Land

Eight hundred steerage passengers on the White Star liner Arabic, who arrived in Boston today, were held aboard the steamship, awaiting instructions from Washington.

Whether all will be permitted to land will depend upon instructions from the chief officials of the Immigration Department.

Immigration Commissioner Johnson, fearing that the quota of Italians allowed in this country under present laws may be exceeded by today's large number of arrivals, wired the Capitol for instructions.

NOTABLES ARRIVE.

The other passengers, including 122 saloon and 294 cabin, were permitted to land and meet their friends and relatives without delay.

The passengers included Countess Dandini de Sylva of Rome, Italy, formerly Miss Mary Palmer of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. She came to visit her brother Bradley.

Among the other prominent persons who arrived were: Bradley Gilman of Boston, Mrs. E. Fanny Pratt, ninety-two years of age, of Hotel Bristol, Boston, who completed her 115th voyage across the Atlantic.

HEIR TO FORTUNE.

Another interesting passenger was Salvatore Guiliano, a poor youth from Italy, whose rich uncle, a Newark, N. J., hat manufacturer, has chosen him as his heir. The uncle came to this country an immigrant, but has made a fortune. From his numerous relatives he selected Salvatore, the young son of his brother, to become possessor of his property.

Because of inability to obtain a cargo in Boston on account of the differential rate the Arabic will go to New York and take one. Later she will return to Boston for passengers and then said for Italy.

Miss Lily F. Darcy of New Bedford today filed with the Secretary of State her nomination papers for Congress from the Sixteenth district. Miss Darcy withdrew her papers in July, claiming that an anti-suffrage sentiment still existed in New Bedford. She will be opposed at a special primary election on October 24 by Charles L. Gifford of Barnstable. Miss Darcy is secretary to Judge Joseph Walsh, who while Congressman for the Sixteenth district was appointed judge of the Superior Court.

LEGION TO FIGHT FOR BETTER LAWS

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 9.—The full weight of the American Legion is to be thrown toward securing the adoption of a constructive legislation program at the next session of Congress, which will meet the wants and desires of the country's ex-service men.

Aside from the so-called soldiers' bonus, the fight over which is expected to be renewed as soon as Congress reconvenes, two outstanding features of the proposed program are:

Enactment of a law which would draft not only fighting men but labor and the rest of the nation's manpower in a national emergency, such as war.

Creation of a new committee in both Senate and House, which would deal exclusively with legislation affecting World War veterans instead of bills and other measures involving them being referred to a dozen different committees, as now is the practice.

TROLLEY OFF RAIL; 2 HURT

Passengers Thrown to Floor When Car Leaps Into Field in Chelsea

The motorman, Wallace Allen of No. 157 Springvale street, Everett, and a passenger, James Squires of No. 50 Haskell avenue, Revere, were badly bruised.

Squires suffered contusions of the arms and shoulders. Several other passengers were thrown to the floor of the car.

The tracks were slippery and treacherous. The car, coming from Woodlawn, was proceeding at a good rate of speed, when there appeared on the tracks a block or so ahead a delivery wagon. Allen applied his brakes suddenly.

The car gave a terrific lurch, left the tracks and pounded along the street. Then it swerved and crashed through the fence.

"I never want to go through an experience like this again," said Patrolman John F. O'Neill of the Chelsea force, who was a passenger. "It felt just as if we were on a huge bucking broncho. It was marvelous that nobody was killed."

In making the swerve across the street, the derailed car narrowly escaped hitting automobiles and a group of children playing on the sidewalk.

TRAFFIC COP CALLS 25 AUTOISTS TO COURT

Patrolman Lester Brackley of the Charlestown station spent a busy week-end with the motorists passing through City Square. The net result of his activities was the appearance in the Charlestown District Court today of twenty-five alleged violators of traffic laws. Eighteen of them were fined $5; five had charges placed on file, one paid a $10 fine and one defaulted.

STATE TYPIST SOUGHT; MAN IN CASE IS HELD

Florence Clifford, a State House stenographer, is being sought by the police on account of her alleged relations with Christopher Ross of No. 366 Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay.

Ross pleaded guilty today when he was arrested charged with a statutory offence. It is claimed that he has been living with the Clifford girl since September 21.

According to the police Miss Clifford held a good position at the State House. Two weeks ago she is said to have resigned to go with Ross.

The pair sought at that time to be married by a justice of the peace in the South End, but the arrival of the girl's mother halted their plans.

HOLD LOWELL WIFE AS SLAYER OF MATE

Mrs. Mary G. Brady of Lowell told the judge in the East Cambridge Court today that she was not guilty of murder and told the sheriff that God would "take care of her."

It was an echo of the shooting of her husband, Frederick W. Brady, water meter inspector, in Lowell City Hall, the pay-day morning of September 29. She was held without bail for trial. This routine over, Mrs. Brady stepped from the stand and started back to jail in escort of Sheriff Fairbairn and Deputy Harry Walker.

Federal Fuel Head Orders Haste in Moving Coal

Washington, Oct. 9 (By International News Service).—To expedite the movement of coal Conrad E. Spens, the Federal fuel distributor, today made an urgent appeal to coal operators and shippers to confine their operations as far as practicable to their normal spheres of distribution to reduce the amount of transportion service now required.

Consumers were asked to confine their purchases to the grades of coal to which they have been accustomed.

MAYOR OFFERED 20,000 TONS OF COAL AT $8.60

Mayor Curley today announced he had received an offer of 20,000 tons of semi-anthracite coal at $8.60 per ton and the same amount of bituminous at $7.50 per ton from a Wilkesbarre, Penn., concern.

The committee who will handle the distribution of municipal coke was made public by the Mayor. Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, chairman of the transit department, will act as chairman; Frank P. Rock, purchasing agent of the city, and Theodore A. Glynn, fire commissioner, all members will serve without pay, with the exception of the secretary, whose name will be announced later, otherwise the city committee could not compete with the other coal dealers, said the Mayor.

So the coke situation remains the same as before as far as municipal coke is concerned. If Mr. Rock is successful in closing a contract with the coke concern, whose ship is tied up alongside of the Navy Yard, and permission is granted by Washington for the yard's use, Mayor Curley and his ommittee will have the 2,500 tons of Alabama coke to deal out to the needy persons in Boston at once.

It is said that there may be some difficulty in obtaining the coke. City officials are still dickering with the concern over the price, which is stated to be $14 a ton, which is by far too high for coke, it is said.

BARTLETT WILL GO ON TRIAL OCT. 25

Judge Sisk in Superior Court today fixed October 25 as the date when Alfred W. Bartlett will go on trial for the murder September 29 of Frank E. Small, Dorchester druggist. Bartlett was taken from jail before Judge Sisk and have counsel assigned. He said he had retained Attorney James E. O'Connell.

KICKS COP AND TRIES TO HANG HIMSELF

Edward Gibbons, forty years old, of No. 37 Lawrence street, Charlestown, got drunk and decided the floor was no place for his feet. He planted them first on the jaw of a cop that tried to arrest him, and then, locked in a cell, tried to keep them off the floor by hanging himself with his suspenders.

Arraigned in the Charlestown District Court today he was given a chance to cool them for sixty days for disturbing the peace and drunkenness.

According to Officers Callahan and Lynch of the Charlestown police they came upon Gibbons last Saturday night giving an imitation of a pupil of the Charlotte Russe School of Russian dancing on a roof. They attempted to take him in. He disturbed the peace and a couple of bones in Callahan's jaw with a well-directed kick.

Later Patrolman Lawless found him dancing some more while suspended by the neck with a pair of suspenders. He was cut down, calmed down and sent to the City Prison to return to normalcy.

WOMEN BAYONETTED BY THE TURKS

New York, Oct. 9.—A tale of horror regarding the Turkish entry into Smyrna and the destruction of the city by fire was told today by Captain J. M. Walters of the American steamship Winona, which arrived here after having landed many refugees at Greek ports.

According to Walters other vessels took aboard only refugees of their own nationalities, leaving it up to the American ship to save as many of the others as was possible.

H. A. Lahman, purser, and other ship's officers said that, with the ship tied up at her dock, those on deck witnessed the most horrible incidents.

The officers said that the Turks' entry was as orderly as could be expected, but once they were inside, the police power broke down and those on the ship could hear frightful screams of suffering women. Two were found near the vessel, bayonetted.

TO STOP RUM-SELLING AT LEGION GATHERING

New Orleans, Oct. 9.—Federal injunction will be applied for to prevent proprietors of certain grocery stores and soft drink establishments selling intoxicating liquors during the American Legion convention week, United States District Attorney Burns announced today.

CHARGES MATE DREW KNIFE; GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Gertrude Levy of No. 28 Wilcox street, testified today before Justice Hall of Suffolk Divorce Court that her husband, while intoxicated, seized a carving knife and threatened to cut the "sign of the cross" on her face.

The couple were married in January, 1921. Mrs. Levy stated that two or three months after their marriage, Max started coming home under the influence of liquor. One night, she said, he was carried home by two men and was resuscitated only with the assistance of a doctor. After that night, she said, he promised to be good.

"His promise, however, was soon broken," she said. "Once he threw a plate of food at me. I threatened to get a divorce and he signed an agreement that he wouldn't abuse me any more."

In August, 1921, Mrs. Levy sued for divorce, but Max again promised to be good and she withdrew her action. Later, she said, he lapsed into his old ways.

"Many times when he wanted money he seized me by the throat and ordered me to cough up," she told the court.

Theodore Bloom, her son, and her brother-in-law, Morris Berman, testified they had seen Max drunk and had heard him utter threats of violence.

TOM BARRY CAPTURED BY THE NATIONALISTS

Belfast, Oct. 9.—National army troops who encountered a party of Republicans in the Carrignavar district, County Cork, took, among other prisoners, Tom Barry, one of the best known Republican leaders, according to dispatches from southern Ireland today.

Barry was originally captured during the siege of the Four Courts in Dublin when he attempted to enter disguised as a nurse. It is reported that when he was apprehended for the second time in the County Cork encounter, important documents were found in his possession. Barry figured prominently in the ambushes of British troops in the days before the truce.

COLE IMPROVING AFTER OPERATION

John N. Cole, State Commissioner of Public Works, who is seriously ill at the Phillips House, at the Massachusetts General Hospital, following an operation, is reported as resting comfortably today by the physicians, who are satisfied with the manner in which he rallied from the operation. His complete recovery is expected.

ONE YOUTH ACCUSES ANOTHER OF CRIME

Schneider, Eyewitness of the Double Murder, Says Chum Shot Couple in Mistake

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 9.—Clifford Hayes was arrested at noon today, charged with the murder of the Rev. Dr. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor H. Mills.

"Upon information in the prosecutor's office obtained from Raymond Schneider and other witnesses, we feel obliged under the circumstances to prefer charge of murder against one Clifford Hayes," says the statement issued by Prosecutor Stricker of Middlesex County.

"Schneider will be held as a material witness, awaiting further developments. Process will be issued out of Somerset County, where it appears the crime was committed, and consequently they will be detained in Somerset County."

The arrest of young Hayes was the result of a 300-word statement dictated and signed by Schneider after he had been grilled for hours by the authorities. He declared he was an eyewitness of the murder of Rector Hall and Mrs. Mills and named Hayes, a nineteen-year-old youth and chum of his, as the slayer.

Schneider asserted that the tragedy was due to a case of "mistaken identity."

He said that the youth he named was "after" another man when he came upon Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills under the big crab apple tree on the Phillips farm, just outside the city, where the murder occurred.

Schneider told detectives Totten and Davis and State Trooper Dyckman that he and the other youth had followed Pearl Bahman, the fifteen-year-old girl, who was with him when he "discovered" the bodies on the Saturday following the tragedy. It was around 11 o'clock on the night in question, September 14.

FIRES THREE SHOTS.

Nearing the farm house, he said, they came upon a couple under a tree which the youth immediately took to be Miss Bahman and "this other man."

"There they are, let me get at them," he quoted his companion as shouting. At the same time, he said, the youth leaped forward and opened fire. Three shots were fired.

As the last died away they rushed upon the bodies, Schneider said. He (Schneider) realized at once "that a terrible mistake had been made.

"D——that's not them," he cried to his companion. "You have made a mistake."

The slayer agreed that such was the case and together they fled the scene. Schneider says he had no idea what his chum did with the murder pistol.

"I didn't see him throw it away," he protested.

The accused youth is being detained as a material witness and announcement of an arrest is expected momentarily. Schneider also is held.

GRILLED ALL NIGHT.

The statement of Schneider, which the authorities hail as the "beginning of the end" of the sensational and prolonged investigation, came as the sequel to a grilling which lasted virtually throughout the night. Schneider in fact has been under interrogation with brief recesses since 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon when he was taken to the county court house.

Schneider, according to the authorities, told several conflicting stories before he made the statement which he declared to be the true story of the murder. In his first account of his activities on the evening of the shooting Schneider, who is only twenty-one years old, revealed that he had heard the shots which ended the lives of the rector and Mrs. Mills and that he saw two men and a woman running from the scene.

He stuck to his story for hours. Finally he broke down and named his companion as the actual slayer, afterwards putting his statement into writing and signing it.

ALL CLASSES, ALL SECTIONS, DENOUNCE MOVIE CENSORSHIP

Censorship Is Autocracy, Says J. H. Vahey

CENSORSHIP is autocracy. Wherever used, it has been the weapon of the highly-organized and reactionary minority. It was used by Czars and Kings to stifle the cry for liberty in the old-world monarchies.

It deleted the expressions which were made for liberty through the press, the stage and from the rostrum.

Censorship would have stayed the trenchant pen of Samuel Adams. It could have deleted Lincoln's address at Gettysburg.

If the workingmen and women of this State believe they have suffered from the abuse of the injunction system; if the business men believe they have suffered from unwarranted interference; if the liberal and independent men and women of this Commonwealth believe the constitutional guarantees of freedom and liberty are slowly but surely being destroyed, let them beware of censorship.

THREAT TO BAY STATE'S LIBERTY SEEN

Still they come. From the southern border of the State to the northern, from Boston to small cities in the Berkshires, come the letters of protest against the proposed censorship of moving pictures in Massachusetts.

That the protest is not confined to any one section or to any particular class of people is clearly shown in the letters. Some denote college education, some are barely legible. Some bear the address of wealthy sections, others come from the sections where the day by day workers dwell.

ALL JOIN HANDS.

All join hands in denouncing the bugaboo of the real American, censorship. Whether it is censorship of the movies, of the press, of dress or of anything else, the true liberty-loving American does not want it. So it is in the fight that is now being waged to keep this odious bill from being enacted into law.

To stimulate the citizens of the State to write their ideas on this matter, so that their neighbor and their neighbor's neighbor may benefit, the Boston American has offered cash prizes for those writing and subhitting the best letter on censorship.

PRIZES OFFERED.

Here are the prizes: First, $250; second, $100, third, $50. Not only that, but the American will present $2 to the writer of each letter that is printed. Every reader of this paper is, therefore, invited to send in his or her opinions on this vital matter. Not only will the writer be eligible for the big prizes but he or she is doing his State a favor in presenting concrete arguments that may enable others to see just what the censorship bill means.

The letters are coming in fast but the Censorship Contest Editor wants more. Send in your views today. It may mean more to you than you expect.

Here are some of the letters received today:

WORLD WANTS TRUTH.

Editor Boston American:

The moving pictures of today, as compared with life itself, are moral. When we enter the moving picture theatre we are seeking amusement, recreation, truth and education.

If we want church, we go to church. If we want a lecture or a Sunday school, we go there. In the motion pictures we want reality, we want to see human emotions as they are, but in an artistic setting.

We see enough camouflage, hypocricy and lies in our daily business. In the motion pictures we want to see an honest portrayal of the human's emotions—the world as the world is.

Censorship deadens and falsifies. The world wants truth.

DEPORT JOY-KILLERS.

Editor Boston American:

It is very evident that some people can't think for themselves, but wish to create a new position for some of these blue law makers at the expense of the public. Why should the public, in general, follow the dictates of a fanatic's mind? Are we illiterate and inferior to these joy-killers who are going around to take the joy out of living?

I am sure that the manager of a theatre, when pictures are shown, will try and cater to the likes and dislikes of the people. Some people have no sense of humor and their vision goes no further than the end of their nose. These agitators should be deported. Some of these people never go to the movies but gain their knowledge from hearsay. If they had their way we should not have any movies, either.

I go to the movies and I am capable of judging for myself the pictures that are shown there. My wife and boy are lovers of the moving pictures and they always come away without a disapproving comment on what they have seen.

If these agitators want to do something good, then they should work in harmony with the people of the State of Massachusetts for the benefit of other bills in the Legislature by which we can accomplish something.

I am sure that when the time arrives the people will repulse this bill with pleasure and put these people back where they belong.

NEED NO DOCTORING.

Editor Boston American:

I think movie censorship will effect no good. If it is a measure to correct an evil what is the evil? Do you ever see an immoral movie? I don't think so.

If a movie were immoral, criminal action against the parties showing the picture could be maintained and the picture prevented from further publication. Producers do not care to go to jail and will not produce improper pictures if criminal prosecution is to follow.

Censorship is therefore not necessary, as our present laws are sufficient to take care of the situation.

Our spoken shows now are censored so terribly that it is common talk that when a show comes from New York it is not the same show at all in Boston because so much of the show has had to be cut out on account of the censors.

One Boston theatre already has refused to run shows on Sunday because they cannot produce an interesting show on account of the cuts demanded by the censors. Some movies now that are shown weekdays are not allowed on Sundays. Why is a picture any worse on Sunday than it was on Saturday? Has it become evil overnight? According to the censors it has.

I believe they would take the juice out of an orange on Sunday before allowing a person to eat it, for fear the person would take too much joy in eating it. All because of its being Sunday. Why is a picture any worse in this State for us to see than it is in New York or any other State?

To me a good way to judge whether we should have censorship of the movies is to compare it with our own lives. If we are well and feeling fit, we do not go to a doctor and say "Examine me and see what doctoring I need. Put me on a diet. I may get sick and I'd rather be on a diet now."

So it is, I believe, with the movies. They are not sick. They are not in need of doctoring. They are produced with the greatest care and everyone knows that better pictures have never been made than the ones shown today. What then, is the need of a censorship which puts movies on a diet? We do not like to have other people's ideas crammed into us.

Let us form our own ideas. An improper show will die a natural death from lack of patronage, or will be stopped by criminal action against the parties showing same.

There is a movie censorship at the producing source now under the direction of Will Hays. Is not this sufficient? The chances of harm coming from lack of State censorship are so remote and so hard to imagine under the existing laws of today that such a law as this is superfluous and places the power with a few individuals to crush the moving picture industry in Massachusetts, and ruin our shows as well as many of our producers who may be irreparably damaged by an arbitrary decision censoring what is considered a good show in every other State in the Union.

A vote for movie censorship within the State, such as is on the ballot November 7, is like driving nails in your own coffin, or committing yourself to jail. Vote against it.

LESLIE G. LORD.

AN ENTERING WEDGE.

Editor Boston American:

Shall a censorship of moving pictures be established? The majority of the people are only mildly interested when that question is asked.

But if they were told that in the near future they could only read books that someone in authority permitted them to read; that their daily papers could only print such news as this authority allowed; that, in fact, even the music they could listen to would have to be first approved of by this authority, what a protest would go up throughout the land.

And this is just what is coming if the people do not wake up and defeat this proposed censorship law.

This censorship of moving pictures is the entering wedge to censorship of our newspapers, magazines and, perhaps, if these fanatics have their way, we will soon be told what food we may eat and what clothes we may wear.

When this proposed censorship law is defeated at the coming State election, it should be defeated by such a large vote that these "censorship fanatics" will hesitate a long time before they propose another law to take away any of the liberties that are ours by right of the Constitution of the United States.

WILLIAM F. FINNEGAN,
No. 122 Otis street, East Cambridge.

Editor Boston American:

In the State of Massachusetts live very intelligent people, and as it would not be a sign of intelligence to vote in favor of the bill calling for State censorship of moving pictures, I predict that the bill will be overwhelmingly defeated.

The moving picture is one of the greatest (if not the greatest) invention of this generation, and it is still in its infancy. It is creative work, and we in Massachusetts know that only creative work can endure; that which is produced by all other work lasts for a short time and then, like the night, it vanishes.

Creative work is also constructive work, and is produced by the best brains in the world. The objectionable moving picture could only be ephemeral, and, being ephemeral, it would not bring big returns to the producer.

Therefore, it may readily be seen that it would under no circumstances be an incentive for the producer to place before the public pictures that would be offensive.

The moving picture people, like all other people with creative minds, take pride in their work, and this being so, who is the sane person that will stand and say that people of high character, who take pride in their work, would stoop so low as to offer for the public's approval something that could be made by the basest person imaginable?

The moving picture comes to us to make us laugh when we are sad; it shows us that there is more in life than simply money, and makes us resolve to be considerate of other people who may be in need; it warns us that after life there is death, and we think twice before we act; and it teaches us patriotism.

It would be a sign of retrogression for the liberal-minded and intelligent people of Massachusetts to endorse State censorship. Massachusetts has always been a progressive State, and will continue to be so. The State censorship bill will be badly defeated here!

C. A. SULLIVAN.

Working Girls Unit in Opposition

If anyone has the idea that working girls in Boston, girls who find nothing but pleasure in the movies, want a State censorship then those people are laboring under a terrible delusion. Perhaps there are some girls who would like censorship but if there are any, the Boston American reporter, who visited Boston stores, was unable to find them.

VOICE OPINIONS.

Miss Claire Strokes of No. 14 Champney street, South Boston, said: "It is ridiculous to think that one man should tell us what we will see and what we will not see in the movies. To begin with, I think the moving pictures we see today are as clean as they can be. We don't have to read books we don't like. Neither do we have to see moving pictures we don't like. We can get up and walk out if we don't like a picture."

Claire Strokes.

Miss Lena Oke of No. 160 State road, Beachmont, is another girl who does not favor censorship of the moving pictures. She said, "I am going to do everything I can to get my friends to vote against censorship. It is not needed and we don't want it. If the people of the State would stop to think what censorship means, I am sure they would see it as I do. This is supposed to be a free country and yet every day brings another attempt to place the thinking power of our people in the hands of a favored few."

Lena Oke

Miss Eva Zimmerman, No. 79 Phillips street, Boston, said: "I am certainly against any effort to censor our moving pictures any more than they are being censored at present. Boston has enough reformers now. If our moving pictures are censored we will probably have to go without our Sunday shows pretty soon. I believe that the public that supports the motion picture industry is well able to censor its own films and no theatres will defy the public in presenting pictures that meet with general disapproval."

Eva Zimmerman.

Miss Buelah Robinson of No. 309 Canton street, Stoughton, gives her opinion, as follows: "Where will this censorship business end? If the voters allow this bill to become effective it is only the opening step to real Blue Laws that will put an end to most of our pleasure. I consider moving pictures as educational as well as entertaining and I would not like to see some man be named to decide for us just what we will see and what we will not see. I hope the women of the State will go out and vote against censorship."

Buelah Robinson.

Miss Sophia Powell of No. 7 Harrison street, Cambridge, says: "I think theatre managers are sensible enough to keep out of their theatres pictures that will offend their patrons. If they don't it will not take the audience long to show its disapproval, if the picture is really bad. That is sufficient censorship and I can't see State censorship in any light than an insult to the intelligence of the American public. One man's opinion of a picture may not agree with his neighbors but that is no reason why his neighbor should not see the picture, if he so desires."

Lynn Central Labor Union Fights Film Censor

At an enthusiastic meeting of the Lynn Central Labor Union, made up of 12,000 union workers of various trades, resolutions were adopted against the State censorship of motion pictures and members urged to do everything they could to defeat the censorship bill at the State election.

Various committees were formed and every one of the forty-two precincts in Lynn will have organized labor representatives working on election day to defeat the bill. The meeting was presided over by the president, Lawrence Curtin.

FILMS TO AID BETTER HOME CAMPAIGN

A nation-wide campaign for better homes has been inaugurated. In Boston some of the most prominent business and public men have endorsed the campaign.

Governor Cox, in an indorsement of the movement, said that the idea of the drive was "to impress upon the youth of our Commonwealth the good that can be accomplished by bending every effort to secure more and better homes."

Mayor Curley has entered wholeheartedly into the idea of the Better Home Campaign and he has absolutely endorsed the movement.

The public school department of Boston has been named as the committee in charge of the drive.

In many of the public schools several films on the subject of home building will be shown. The children will be able to view them without charge during the afternoon and at night the parents can also visit the buildings.

On October 10 shows will be run at the School of Practical Arts, Greenville street, Roxbury; October 11, at the Charlestown High School, East Boston High School, South Boston High School and the Michael Angelo School in the North End.

The house is the bulwark of the nation, the leaders in the movement contend. Every man, woman and child should help in the drive.

Claimed by Death

GEN. BENJ. F. BRIDGES.

Greenfield, Oct. 9.—General Benjamin F. Bridges, for twenty-one years warden of the State Prison at Charlestown, and former commander of the State militia, died at his home here on Lincoln street. He suffered a paralytic shock twelve days ago.

Warden Bridges, respected alike by his charges and the public during his incumbency at Charlestown, was appointed to the post by Governor William E. Russell. Previous to his advent at the prison rioting and utter lack of discipline had been prevalent.

By the kindly methods of discipline with which he had commanded the loyalty of his men in the militia, Bridges soon brought order out of chaos.

The General was 86 years old on May 30 this year and had been vigorous and active until the recent shock. He is survived by one son, Corrill E. Bridges, of Malden, and by several brothers and sisters.

OSTRACISM FOR KLAN URGED BY PASTOR

Worcester, Oct. 9.—Business, political and social ostracism for all known members of the Ku Klux Klan was advocated by Rev. George F. Flynn at all masses at St. Bernard's parish.

Disruption of the Klan, he asserted, can be accomplished by an attack on one of the great factors of its methods, its secrecy.

"I want the secretary of my Holy Name Society to appoint a committee of fifty men to attend all public meetings of the Ku Klux Klan," Father Flynn said, "in order to get the names of as many of those present as possible, to ascertain whether they are members, and learn through the applause how many and who seem to be in sympathy with the organization."

Publication of these names would follow. "When these people see that they are losing money, they will squeal loudly," Father Flynn continued. "Many of them do not realize they have souls. Their pocketbooks are the only souls with which they are concerned."

Publicity and ostracism as a method of attack has already been worked successfully in Chicago, according to Father Flynn. He did not base his attack on the Klan on religious grounds, but on grounds of American citizenship.

"Catholics and fair-minded Protestants should unite to crush this latest and meanest manifestation of religious intolerance," he declared.

FIND FIVE BOYS SHOT TO DEATH NEAR DUBLIN

By International News Service.

Dublin, Oct. 9.—Corpses of five youths who had been shot to death were found by the roadside near Dublin early today.

Officials declare that the Republican campaign is resolving itself into a "murder offensive."

There was heavy firing throughout the night in Dublin. Operations by the Free State troops over the week-end were of a minor character.

Belfast, Oct. 9 (By International News Service).—One policeman and a Republican were killed when Republicans ambushed a police detachment near Keady, County Armagh, today. Another policeman was wounded.

The conference arranged here by Catholics between Ulster Nationalists and Sinn Feiners, in an effort to restore unity between Ulster and the rest of Ireland, broke down today.

Y. M. C. A. TO STAGE BI-MONTHLY DINNERS

The new members' dinner of the Boston Y. M. C. A., which up to the present has been a monthly event, has grown to such an extent that the association has decided to divide it into two sections, that is, two dinners will be given each month instead of one. The dinner on October 19 will be primarily for students, and one on October 26 will be for general members. There will be speakers at both who will welcome the new members and explain the aims of the Y. M. C. A.

JOBLESS FATHER DROWNS 3 CHILDREN IN TUB, THEN KILLS SELF

BIDS WIFE WORK FOR 'LORD'

Rochester, N. Y., Man Orders Spouse Pay All Bills and Hold No Funerals

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 9.—The bodies of a father and his three children today are lying side by side in an undertaking establishment here, victims of a quadruple tragedy.

The children, Etheyln, five; Grace, two, and Russell Wheeler, six months, were drowned in a bathtub at their home by the father, William E. Wheeler, who, after witnessing life pass from the little ones, fired a bullet into his brain. Despondency because of inability to obtain employment was responsible for the crime, police said.

Wheeler's wife discovered the bodies after she returned to her home from church. A note, protruding from the bathroom door, led her to investigate. The contents told of the act of her husband and gave instructions as to the disposition of his remains and the furniture of the house.

"NO OTHER WAY OUT."

It read, in part:

"Dear Milly:

"It had to come, at last. I can see no other way out. Don't have any funeral for me. Do not notify the folks or the truest friends. This is too disgraceful to call them in.

"Have my body cremated, if possible, without a funeral. Pay every bill. That's what I did for you. I'll take the kiddies with me, so you and no one else can say that I left them a burden on you. If I were to hang on longer it would only be the same old story.

"Please don't try to keep the furniture or house. I want to see you free to do something for the Lord. Don't sorrow for me or the children. You will soon realize we are better off dead. No doubt you will never see me again. Good-bye, forever.

EMBRACED IN DEATH.

"Please don't have any funeral for us. Don't say anything to the police or reporters. Keep quite."

Mrs. Wheeler, who swooned after the bathroom door was broken down by a boarder, today told police when she left the home her husband appeared to be in excellent spirits. The children at that time were in bed. When she failed to find them in their respective beds she began a search which revealed the tragedy.

The children were found clasped in each others arms in the bottom of the tub, which was half filled with water. The father hung over the edge of the tub, still clutching the pistol in his hand.

Americans Hated in Europe Because of Prosperity

New York, Oct. 9.—Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., eldest son of General Grant, who has just returned on the Red Star liner Finland with Mrs. Grant from a three months' trip abroad, advises all Americans to keep away from Europe, where, he says, they are hated generally because of their prosperity.

Mr. Grant said that he and his wife were frequently insulted in various cities. German shopkeepers frequently refused to sell goods.

In Vienna and other cities, hotels had no accommodations, and traveling by train was very uncomfortable.

STRIKERS WOULD OUST POLICE HEAD

Haverhill, Oct. 9.—A mass meeting of the boot and shoe workers on strike here, at Lafayette Hall today, discussed means to bring about the dismissal of Chief of Police Albert E. Bartlett for his tactics during the last three weeks.

It was charged that Bartlett issued the most drastic order on record in Haverhill, to the effect that all strikers seen near any of the shoe factories affected by the strike were to be arrested.

Three weeks ago Bartlett was left $100,000 in the will of Mrs. Augusta H. Tasker, a lifelong friend. Other heirs of the widow are contesting the will. It was said that prior to the legacy Bartlett posed as the friend of the workingman, but that since he received notice of the bequest he has done everything he could to persecute strikers.

Another meeting is to be held tomorrow, at which 18,000 workers are expected to attend.

GOLF CHAMPION GOES UNDER KNIFE

New York, Oct. 9.—Gene Sarazen, youthful United States open golf champion, is in St. John's Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, recovering from an operation for appendicitis. He was reported in fine condition, and his recovery, according to the attending physicians, was assured. Sarazen on Saturday defeated Walter Hagen in a 72-hole match over the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club course. He won by three up and two to go.

'KNIGHTHOOD' PRAISED BY LONDON PRESS

By Universal Service.
From a Staff Correspondent.

London, Oct. 9.—"The film itself makes an excellent story, and is finely produced and photographed. Miss Marion Davies is beautiful and attractive as Mary Tudor."

In these words the London Post sums up "When Knighthood Was in Flower," the georgeous screen spectacle of one of the most romantic periods in English history, which continued during the week to swell the London Hospital's fund at the Scala Theatre. It evoked the interest of the Prince of Wales and he saw it twice, the first time a command performance at York House, his London residence.

"The Prince," continues the Post, "was warmly received in the theatre. In the box opposite to him there were a number of crippled children. This was at the request of Miss Davies, who plays the part of Mary Tudor in the film. She sent a check for one thousand pounds for box money going into the endowment of a hospital ward.

A BEAUTIFUL PRODUCTION.

"It is a very beautiful production from a technical point of view. The plot revolves around the marriage of Mary Tudor (Marion Davies) with Louis XII. of France and her intrigues with Charles Brandon.

"Lyn Harding plays the part of Henry VIII. with ability. Forrest Stanley is well accomplished as Brandon, while William Norris as Louis XII. has given a good character sketch."

The London Daily Graphic declaring that "When Knighthood Was in Flower" is "indeed a mammoth production," said: "Lyn Harding, who was present at the opening, played Henry VIII. and his performance was a work of genius."

The London Cinema describes "When Knighthood Was in Flower" as having beautiful settings, and goes on to say:

"The film deals most extravagantly with the love of Mary Tudor, sister of Henry VIII., for Charles Brandon, depicted here as captain of the guards. Henry wants Mary Tudor to marry Louis XII. of France and actually does succeed in forcing the ceremony. But not before Charles and the Princess have made a gallant attempt to elope together and not before the head of Charles Brandon has been narrowly saved from the block in the Tower of London.

FULL OF ROMANTIC INTEREST.

"Miss Marion Davies, who has made a regular spitfire of Mary Tudor, also contributes her share to lighter vein by grimacing at French envoys and pelting the King's tailor with his stuffs.

"The sets are elaborate, plentiful, and the romantic interest of the historical incident of Mary's love has been used without restraint. Swords are flashing in most of the scenes—and Mary Tudor herself in the guise of a trooper during the flight with Brandon, played by Forrest Stanley, has a set-to with a rascal in Bristol Inn."

The Daily Mail says of the production that it is able and "is sure in its effects, and undoubtedly has many points of appeal."

The Westminster Gazette says, "its scenes of pageantry are brilliantly conceived and are more human than such scenes are usually made. There is also good acting by Lyn Harding as Henry VIII. and Miss Marion Davies as Mary Tudor."

CONGRESSMAN FOR TEN HOURS, MISTAKE

A. P. Connor of Springfield, was a Congressman for a few hours today. At any rate, he thought so. Connor, who ran on the Republican ticket for Congressman, was notified today by the Secretary of State's office that he had been nominated on the Democratic ticket.

Connor, in all loyalty to his party, notified the Secretary's office that he would not accept the Democratic nomination. A few hours after delivering his refusal he was again notified that the entire matter had been a mistake and that all they could give him would be the defeated ticket of a Republican nominee for Congress.

Green Edition Has It All but the Violet Rays

In its columns it endeavors to print the news of the day in as graphic a style as possible without trifling with the facts.

The most colorful events of the day appear in the most colorful edition of the day—the colored Green. And, as J. M. Teitelbaum, optician, of No. 8 Winter street, says, the Green edition is not only interesting, but restful to the eyes. Says Optician Teitelbaum:

"Like colored glasses, the Green Edition absorbs violet light rays. Green contains about all the light rays nature intended should enter the eye. Almost any light is preferable to pure white, which reflects rather than absorbs the injurious ultra violet and infra red rays.

"Green is the ideal color for anything that is intended to be read, which sounds like a paradox, but is the scientific truth."

MOVIE NEWS and NOTES

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

THE big Fox film "Nero" is a truly marvelous example of spectacular photography, and the value of such pictures in acquainting moderns with the ancient civilizations of Rome and Greece is incalculable. A knowledge of history is not one of the things the American people are noted for, and while the average citizen could pass a fair examination on events in this country since 1776, he is blissfully unaware of most of what went on in Europe for two thousand years past.

There is one failing in "Nero," and it was also noticeable in "Theodora" and other Roman films which were actually made in Italy, and that is the lack of discipline and training in the Roman armies. They go into battles like disorderly mobs, carefully holding their spears in a vertical position and lacking any evidence of science.

The truth is that the Roman legions were superbly disciplined. They went into battle in much the same marching formations used by modern armies, except that company front with the Romans meant three ranks of men instead of two ranks, as with us. They attacked shoulder to shoulder, spears leveled, with their shields making a steel wall, the long spears of the rear rank men projecting over the shoulders of the front rank men, reinforcing the hedge of spears and making it tough going for opposing cavalry or infantry. Griffith, in his "Intolerance," made no effort to show the military discipline of the Babylonians and Persians, but these modern Roman directors evidently are not familiar with their own golden age.

STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES NOW.

THE preview of the long heralded stereoscopic motion picture, "The Power of Love," shown with the Fairall Process of Stereoscopic Exhibition, was viewed at the Hotel Ambassador Theatre on Wednesday evening, and acclaimed by all present to be the greatest advance in motion picture [illegible].

The prologue before the feature, showing scenes from the Yosemite Valley, received continuous applause from the start to the finish of the reel, something very unusual for a motion picure.

The Fairall stereoscopic method shows the depth and perspective of every detail and scene, and transfigures the screen into a window of reality, bringing before the audience a procession of life's drama. Harry K. Fairall, the inventor, has toiled for seven years to attain this perfection in stereoscopic exhibition, which is protected by twenty-seven patents.

A FISHES AT HOME DAY.

AL ST. JOHN'S first two-reel special comedy for Fall release has been completed, according to an announcement by the Fox Film Corporation. It is called "All Wet," and a great part of the action takes place under water.

This probably is the first time that the comedy possibilities of under-water photography have been taken advantage of to any great extent and from all reports the experiment has proved a distinct success.

The comedy starts off where most feature pictures end—on the hero and heroine's wedding night. They spend their honeymoon close to the sea—too close in fact—and one morning they arise to find various kind of sea-going creatures making themselves at home in every part of the house.

LEE KIDS AGAIN.

THOSE irrepressible youngsters, Jane and Katherine Lee, have been brought back to the screen in revised and re-edited versions of some of their former successes. The pictures have been edited by Ralph Spence and cut down to two reels. One of the comedies is called "A Pair of Aces," and is made up of the funniest situations and bits of business to be culled from several of the most amusing of the original eight reelers.

POISON IN MILK; FRIEND DRINKS IT

Lynn, Oct. 9.—John H. R. Howarth of No. 53 Elsmere avenue was painfully burned today when he drank from a bottle of milk on his doorstep. The milk contained a large quantity of sulphur napthol which William Beattie, another occupant of the same house, had placed there to punish thieves who have been stealing his supply daily for a week. Howarth is an auditor for the Gainaday Electric Company of No. 140 Boylston street, Boston.

HUNTING BAN OFF IN MAINE

Augusta, Me., Oct. 9.—Governor Baxter today rescinded the proclamation he issued last Wednesday, suspending the open season on hunting in Maine, four days after the deer season opened, because of the critical situation brought about by forest fires. He issued a warning against carelessness in building and extinguishing fires by hunters.

Joseph C. Pelletier, Democratic nominee for district attorney of Suffolk, will be feted at a mammoth reception and Columbus Day celebration by the Mothers' Club of Brighton on October 12.

All the women of the Brighton and Allston districts have been invited and delegations from various societies will be in attendance.

"NOT MARRIED" NON-SUPPORT DEFENCE

Lawrence, Oct. 9.—Mrs. John J. Morrissey told the court today her husband did not provide for her and that, for the past three days, she was "almost starved."

Morrissey not only denied this but also startled court and spectators by saying:

"We were never married. We have been living together for about ten years." He added that, while they were united by a Lawrence minister the ceremony was performed without a mariage license.

Then the woman said:

"Well, as a matter of fact, the marriage was probably not a legal one in strict sense as there was no license. But a minister officiated and I always believed it was a proper marriage and did nothing moer about it."

On the charge of failure to provide Mrs. Morrissey declared her husband had $950 in a Lawrence bank. She said he had provided for her up to a fortnight ago and all went well until then, when he told her their wedding ceremony was no marriage.

She asserted: "I believe he has become interested in another woman."

Morrissey denied that his wife was anywhere near starved. He said he paid her $7 a week during the recent textile strike and that, when he had his job as night watchman back, he gave her $8 weekly.

Associate Justice Chandler continued the case a month for investigation and urged the couple to adjust matters if possible. They left the courtroom together.

SOAP KING, 72, FINDS PASTIME IN DANCING

London, Oct. 9.—Lord Leverhulme, millionaire soap king of Britain, arises at 4:30 o'clock each morning for a hard day's work, despite his seventy-two years.

Lord Leverhulme.

He begins gymnastics immediately upon arising. This is followed by a cold bath, shaving and dressing.

At 5:10 Lord Leverhulme sips his tea the while he attacks reports from the heads of his various companies.

In the evening Lord Leverhume indulges in his favarite social pastime, dancing. He is agile and graceful in terpsichore, though two score years older than most of his rivals.

TALLEYRANDS IN N. Y. AFTER TEN YEARS

New York, Oct. 9.—The Duchess de Talleyrand, formerly Anna Gould, is in New York again after an absence of ten years. Her husband, the Duke de Talleyrand, who is with her, is hopeful that the lake in Central Park will freeze over before they continue to Europe on the last lap of a six-months' trip around the world. The Duke is fond of skating. He recalled today his last visit here and the enjoyable times he had skating in Central Park.

REVERE FIRE OFFICIAL LOSES AUTO LICENSE

The auto license of Lieutenant Philip G. W. Golliff, of the Revere fire department was today suspended by State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin after Golliff had been tried in the Lynn Court on the charge of operating while under the influence of liquor.

Golliff was said to have been driving either his own or another private car at the time of his arrest. W. Arthur Lincoln of Medford, another autoist, was tried on the same charge at the same time.

Judge O'Brien discharged them both and said: "The odor of liquor on a man's breath is not sufficient to convict a man of operating an automobile while under the influence, unless he has previously been convicted of drunkenness."

Goodwin decided to suspend the licenses of both, including the right of Lieutenant Golliff to drive any auto apparatus of the Revere fire department.

Goodwin also suspended the license of Edwin A. Reed of Lynn.

The pelts include 17,000 Alaskan sealskins, to be sold for the United States government. CARUSO WIDOW REGRETS WILL CONTEST

New York, Oct. 9.—"I have determined to join with my brothers and sisters, not merely to prevent an unjust disposition of my father's estate, but to show how utterly unjustified was the unnatural attack upon all the children."

Mrs. Caruso
Mishkin, N. Y.

This was one of the first statements of Mrs. Enrico Caruso upon her arrival here on the liner Adriatic. She was accompanied by her daughter Gloria.

The tenor's widow, who has been in Italy since April 23, refused to discuss what definite action she plans in the contest of the will of her father, Park Benjamin.

"I cannot believe that father was himself when he executed such a will," she said.

"I regret that the influences which induced such a will must be aired in court. They caused our family, including my dear mother, much sorrow in father's life time, and the result after his death is most unfortunate to everybody concerned.

"It is distressing to learn that, after a man's death, and before his children can be heard, a paper containing such a cruel and unwarranted statement, reflecting upon every one of his children, can be filed in the public records. I cannot conceive that such a will, executed under such circumstances, will stand."

Many of Hub's Smart Set at Piping Rock Horse Show, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE Bayard Warrens just can't seem to stay away from any sort of a sporting event, whether it's a horse show, a polo match or a canine exhibit. Wherefore the former "Lily" Sears and her husband joined the Boston contingent, going down to Long Island for the annual horse show at the Piping Rock Club.

At this event the Warrens were among the guests for whom Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock gave a luncheon under the trees close to the ring. In the same party were also Miss "Eleo" Sears, Mr. and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark and Mrs. J. Averell Clark, the latter a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock.

Speaking of the Hitchcocks—Mr. Hitchcock, by the way, is a member of Boston's exclusive Somerset Club—reminds one that their son, Tommy Hitchcock, Jr., will be the nucleus for the Harvard polo team which is being organized at the university across the Charles. Young Hitchcock, it will be remembered, played on the victorious 1921 American team which defeated the Britishers.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren, who make a long season of it at "Barberry Hill," their Pride's Crossing estate, usually spend the cold months at Aiken, S. C., which is also the Winter home of the Hitchcocks.

MRS. THOMAS P. LINDSAY of Southboro is the guest in Washington of her stepfather, Thomas Nelson Page, at the latter's apartment at the Powhatan. Mr. Page was formerly Ambassador to Italy.

WHEN little Alice Harding became the bride of young Robert Thompson Pell last month in St. John's Church at Beverly Farms, one of the most distinguished guests at the wedding was the groom's grandfather, Colonel Robert M. Thompson.

I understand that the Colonel has started on a trans-continental tour as host to Lord Louis Mountbatten and his bride. This interesting couple—they are semi-royal—are spending their honeymoon in the land of the Stars and Stripes, which is not the usual mode of wedding journey procedure for European nobility. However, Lord Mountbatten and his attractive bride seem to be enjoying every bit of their trip, even to the rather large number of hot dogs which they imbibed at their first baseball game last week.

Mrs. Thompson, who was also present at the Pell-Harding nuptials, is too ill to accompany the Colonel on his tour, and is now spending the month of October at the Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, where she arrived a few days ago.

MRS. NATHANIEL THAYER, as well as the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Gillett, were of the distinguished week-end party which the former Ambassador to France and Mrs. Henry White gave at "Elm Court," their beautiful Berkshire place in Lenox.

Also in the party were the Rev. Canon Carnegie and Mrs. Carnegie of London, General Pershing, Representative John Jacob Rogers and Mrs. Rogers of Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Potter, Colonel Lloyd Carpenter Griscom and Charles Hayden, all of New York.

Golf managed to keep Mr. and Mrs. White's guests very much occupied, and there was no end of good-natured rivalry among the players.

GEORGE M. T. McKAY has joined the Boston colony spending the Autumn months at Hot Springs, Va.

MR. AND MRS. WHEATON B. BYERS and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Saltonstall were among the Bostonians who attended the marriage of Miss Mary Church to Donald Mitchell Weston, solemnized last Saturday night in the St. James Episcopal Church at Great Barrington.

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Clark Terry Durant and Miss Louise Durant gave a ball in honor of the bride and groom. The affair, to which 250 guests were bidden, was held in the magnificent Hopkins-Searles mansion at Great Barrington. There was dancing in the great music hall, the latter the Louis XIV room of gold, which was imported from Paris in sections, and also in the atrium built of rose of ivory marble from the Atlas Mountains of Northern Africa and surrounded by ionic marble pillars from Athens.

The bride, who was educated in Boston, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. C. Church of Great Barrington. Mr. Weston, who is a Yale Sheffield '14 man, is the son of the late Lieutenant Governor Byron Weston of Massachusetts.

BOSTON'S FOOD FAIR OPENS TODAY

The Boston Food Fair opened at Horticultural Hall today and will continue until October 21.

This year's fair is expected to be the best ever given by the association. James E. Sheridan, manager of the show, has new ideas in connection with the event which is yearly becoming a bigger and more interesting Boston institution.

Everything is in readiness. Booths and tables are gaily decorated and grocers from all parts of Greater Boston are bringing their wares to the hall for exhibition for what is expected to be one of the largest crowds in the fair's history.

4 ARE INJURED AS AUTOS CRASH

Two persons were probably fatally injured and two others slightly hurt when two heavy autos met head-on in front of the Methuen Armory, on the Lawrence-Lowell boulevard.

Mrs. Joseph LaValley of No. 236 Branch street, Lowell, sustained a compound fracture of the skull, and Mrs. Rose Allard of No. 135 Fletcher street, Lowell, a fracture at the base of the skull and lacerations of the head, legs and body. Joseph La Valley had a shoulder dislocated, in addition to several broken ribs and Arthur Allard sustained a broken collarbone.

The car in which they were riding collided with a machine driven by Manuel S. Martin of No. 51 Driscoll street, Salem. Four persons in the latter car escaped injuries. Slippery roads were thought responsible for the crash.

BRITAIN FEARS U. S., SAYS MRS. M'SWINEY

Lawrence, Oct. 9.—"England controls Washington," declared Mrs. Muriel McSwiney in addressing a meeting of the Terence McSwiney Branch, A. A. R. I. R.

"The whole trouble in Ireland today," she said, "is caused by the education of Irish children in English schools, where they are brought up as Englishmen. England has only one fear today. That fear is America. She is jealous of America."

Other speakers scornfully reproached the Free State side in Ireland.

SEES SWEETHEART'S CLOTHES ON ANOTHER

Chicago, Oct. 9.—When H. C. Larsen saw a young woman walking down Wabash avenue wearing what he thought were his fiancee's clothes, he called a policeman who arrested Miss Emily Gibson, nineteen years old. Miss Marian Rossan, Larsen's sweetheart, identified the clothes as belonging to her.

Bright as Youth—
Dignified as Age

The diamond sparkles with joy like a thing alive It has the endless fire of youth within its depths

The diamond has dignity, power, and strength. And so it is the stone by which all other gems are judged

Some people prefer other jewels for special pieces of jewelry, but almost everyone, from both tradition and choice, prefers the diamond for the stone to wear year after year

That is why the diamond has become the accepted gem for engagement rings. Individual tastes are expressed in the setting selected. Other stones may be used to enhance its beauty and contrast, but the diamond continues its reign as the jewel supreme.

We have been diamond merchants for one hundred and twenty-two years. We offer you diamonds carefully selected and artistically mounted at prices commensurate with their value.

JOYOUS WEEK FOR ORPHANS AS BOSTON AMERICAN'S GUESTS

BIG MOVIE TREAT AT ORPHEUM

Inmates of Various Institutions Will See "Forget-Me-Not"

Nearly a thousand orphan children from different Greater Boston institutions will see the wonder picture "Forget-Me-Not" this week, as guests of the Boston American and the management of the Orpheum Theatre.

Every morning, at ten o'clock, a string of touring cars will line up in front of one of the homes for motherless and fatherless children. The youngsters will be bundled into the cars, taken for a drive about the city, and landed at the doors of the theatre, to be carried home again after the film.

FILM OF MOTHER LOVE.

"Forget-Me-Not" is, in some ways, rather an appropriate picture for the little fellows and girls who have no home. It deals with the love of a mother, with scenes of happy home life, with all that little orphans like to see and dream about.

There is a dog in this film, too. A real boy's dog, faithful, playful and affectionate—just the kind that every kid longs to own. And this dog, "Queenie," may not have any place among the list of stars, but he is one of the big reasons why "Forget-Me-Not" is such a tremendous success.

Today several hundred childgen from the Home for Jewish Children, at Canterbury and Austin streets, Dorchester, will be taken to the Orpheum Theatre in autos donated for the purpose by C. F. Rockwell, Inc., New England distributors of the Nash car.

TREAT FOR BOYS.

On Tuesday and Wednesday mornings the boys from the House of the Angel Guardian, Jamaica Plain, will be taken to see the film. There are so many of these youngsters that they have to be taken in relays. Hence two days are devoted to them.

A whole bunch of homes are to be visited Thursday. They are the Home for Italian Children, the Ingleside Home in Revere, the New England Home for Little Wanderers, the Martin Luther Home and the Home for Destitute Catholic Children.

Final arrangements for Friday and Saturday have not yet been made, but before the end of the week announcement of the homes to be visited on those days will be made public.

LOLLYPOPS AND BANQUET.

Every morning the children will be taken for a ride about Boston before going to the Orpheum. Frank Archer of the Moxie Company will distribute lollypops—and what's a "kid" party without lollypops?—before each performance.

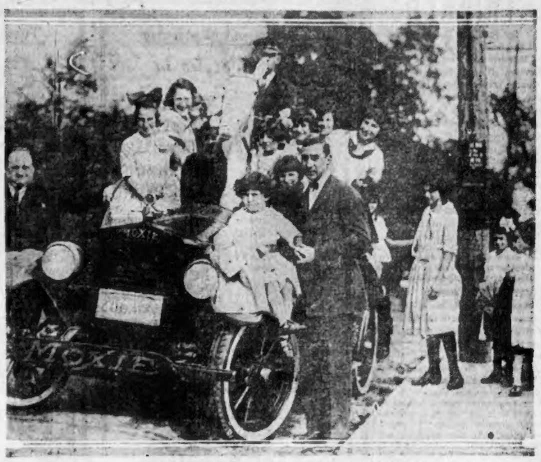
And the Elks, never behind hand when there are luckless children to be entertained, have arranged to give each batch of children a real, honest-to-goodness banquet at their home on Somerset street after each performance. The Elks know just what the kiddies like, and they have promised to give them a dinner that will be talked about for a long time afterward.

PUBLIC CAN WITNESS FISHERMEN'S RACES

The S. S. Dorothy Bradford is making a series of post-season trips in following the fishermen's races. The first of these will be the elimination races to be held off Gloucester October 12 and 13. No better way to spend the holiday than on the ocean.

A limited number of tickets is now on sale at the wharf office, 400 Atlantic avenue. There will be a special excursion Sunday, October 15, leaving Boston at 10 a. m. and stopping three hours in the quaint old harbor of Gloucester, giving passengers an opportunity to see the racing boats at close range.

ORPHANS GET AUTO RIDE



WONDERFUL DAY FOR KIDDIES

HAYS HERE TO LEAD DRIVE FOR NEAR EAST

Will H. Hays, former Postmaster-General and present czar of the motion picture industry, is in Boston to perfect plans for the Near East Emegency Fund drive, which will be launched immediately under the combined endorsement of ten American relief organizations.

Mr. Hays was invited by President Harding to head the committee to obtain public contributions. His chief task will be to co-ordinate activities of the leaders of the organizations.

Funds will be collected chiefly under direction of the American Red Cross and the Near East Relief. Special emphasis will be placed on this work during the Red Cross membership drive, November 11 to 30.

"The emergency exists; the American Red Cross and the Near East Relief will meet that emergency," said Mr. Hays. "They are the natural agencies and they have assumed the responsibilities.

"The other great organizations will co-operate. It is not a question of how much money will be needed or how much money will be raised, but a question of how many lives can be saved."

"Immediate and liberal response from the public is imperative," said Dr. James L. Barton, chairman of the Near East Relief, with whom Mr. Hays conferred at No. 14 Beacon street.

JAPS DEFER VERDICT IN ANDREWS' CASE

Tokio, Oct. 9, (By the Associated Press).—The court examination of R. M. Andrews, a prominent American resident of Japan, for several days the subject of police investigation, was concluded Saturday. Andrews is charged with having visited fortifications in a motorboat and of having taken photographs of the defences.

The court announced it would examine the Japanese crews that accompanied Andrews before reaching a decision. It was said Andrews would not consent to a dismissal of the charge against him without a complete investigation. He was technically arraigned Thursday, his residence searched and papers and photographs seized.

THIEVES GET $50 LOOT IN WHITMAN STORES

Whitman, Oct. 9.—Cigar and cigarette burglars broke into two stores and all they got was $50 worth of goods in one and a cut hand in another.

Entering the Crescent lunchroom through a side window the thieves took a quantity of cigars and cigarettes and made good their escape. Then they got into the fruit store of A Malagoli a short distance away and were helping themselves to cigars when a clerk entered. He fled to his room and the thieves ran the other way. In getting out a window one was badly cut.

ENGLAND RETURNS 15 TONS GOLD TO FRANCE

Paris, Oct. 9 (Bl the Associated Press).—The British tug Quentin Roosevelt, carrying fifteen tons of gold bars worth about $10,000,000, ran into heavy seas and was forced to find refuge in the harbor at Boulogne. The tug was on her way from Dover to Calais. At Boulogne the cargo was brought on a special train to Paris, where it was placed in the Bank of France. This shipment represents a part of that consignment which was sent to England in 1916, during the dark days of the war for France.

The Federal Grand Jury will begin an investigation tomorrow of the disappearance of more than $50,000 worth of bonded whiskey stored in the Bay State Storage Warehouse in Springfield, it was learned today.

Thirty witnesses, all men, have been summoned in connection with the case.

The stolen whiskey had been seized in raids and was being held at the warehouse pending final action. When the liquor was checked over, following the beginning of condemnation proceedings, it was found that many of the barrels actually held tea, which had been substituted for the stolen whiskey.

DIAMOND MERCHANTS & JEWELERS

You Are Welcome To this 10-Day Test

Send the coupon for it.

This test will bring you a new conception of what clean teeth mean.

Within one week you will see and feel results that old methods cannot bring. And you will always want them.

This Added Charm

At your command now—prettier teeth

Nothing you can add to beauty means so much as prettier teeth. Millions now attain them in a new way. Dainty people of some fifty nations employ this method now.

But it means far more than beauty. It means cleaner, safer teeth. Leading dentists everywhere are urging its adoption.

This is to urge you, in fairness to yourself, to see the results of this method

That dingy film

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. You can feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. Most tooth troubles and most dingy teeth are now traced to film.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look cloudy. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. All these troubles have been constantly increasing, despite all care, because the ordinary tooth paste cannot effectively fight film

New methods now

Dental science has long been seeking ways to fight that film. Two effective methods have been found. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it. And this is done gently, day by day, without the use of harmful grit.

Able authorities have amply proved these methods. Now leading dentists, all the world over, are advising their daily use.

A new-type tooth paste has been created, based on modern research. It brings other and new desired effects, and avoids some old mistakes. The name is Pepsodent. In that scientific tooth paste are embodied those two great film combatants.

Old methods wrong

Modern research also shows that tooth pastes based on soap and chalk are wrong. Being alkaline, they reduce the salivary flow. They reduce the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

They reduce the alkalinity of the saliva, which is there to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay.

Pepsodent corrects those errors. It multiplies the starch digestant, multiplies the alkalinity. Thus every use gives manifold power to Nature's great tooth-protecting forces in the mouth.

You see the results in more smiles

Look about in any circle. Note how many pretty teeth you see. Note how people show them when they smile. Everywhere you can see the results of this new film combatant.

And those whiter teeth mean cleaner, safer teeth. The teeth's great enemies are effectively combated. It means that your children can better avoid the troubles that you may have suffered.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean your teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

That test will be delightful. Its results will be a revelation to you. It may lead, for you and yours, to life-long benefits. Cut out the coupon now.

Lace a Cantilever Shoe and—it conforms to your foot. Pulling the laces makes the shoe hug the instep with a firm, restful support. As you tighten the strings, the under-arch sole is drawn up until it meets the foot and fits the curve of the arch. The Cantilever Shoe, therefore, supports the foot at every point and relieves the muscles of all strain.

The Cantilever Shoe FLEXES with the foot and permits the muscles to exercise with every step. A stiff-soled shoe, or a metal appliance binds the muscles, restricts their movement, and weakens their vitality by stopping circulation.

Cantilever Shoes are a boon to people who grow weary from walking or being on their feet for long hours. For Cantilevers have a natural inner sole line that encourages correct poise, a proper balance of weight, an easy, tireless carriage. Try Cantilevers this week. Good looking, fine leathers, trim lines.

GALLI-CURCI PACKS BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

By FRED J. McISAAC.

That the Boston Opera House will be a big factor in things musical this season, under the management of L. H. Mudgett, was demonstrated yesterday when Galli-Curci sang to more than were ever in the building before. After all seats were sold, five of six hundred persons were placed upon the vast stage.

Galli-Curci apparently is more popular today than ever before. She is a very fortunate woman. She occupies in America just now the post of most celebrated coloratura soprano, a role played in the past by Tetrazzini, Sembrich, Melba and Jennie Lind. And in vocal equipment, artistry and personality she is not to be compared with these.

She burst upon the world about five years ago at a performance of the Chicago Opera Company and became famous over night. Her first concert tour of America made it appear that a great star had arisen. Certainly she sang delightfully at her first concert in Boston, and gave no evidence of the faults that are now apparent.

Galli-Courci has actually gone backwards instead of forwards since her first season. Instead of improving her voice and her method she has deteriorated. Yesterday afternoon she sang dell'Acqua's Villanelle with flute obligato, admirably played by Berenguer, and she sang much of the florid music out of tune, winding up with a high tone which slid off the pitch and broke off pathetically.

In the French songs by Debusy and d'Erlanger she was at her best, for her middle register has always been the most beautiful part of her voice. She was dresed like somebody from Chauve-Souris.

Scores Big Hit

HARRISON HUNTER,

U. S. Marine Band

By special permission of President Harding, the United States Marine Band, which is the official band of the White House in Washington, is to visit Boston and give a pair of concerts in Symphony Hall on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, October 26.

Isadcra Duncan

Isadora Duncan, the dancer, after an absence of several seasons, is to give three performances in Symphony Hall, Thursday and Friday evenings, October 19-20, and Saturday afternoon, October 21.

DETECTIVE IN 'THE BAT' IS THINKER

By FRED J. McISAAC.

If the detectives of America don't get together pretty soon and present Harrison Hunter with something valuable they are betraying ingratitude, for the leading man of "The Bat" has done more to improve the condition of the stage cop than any other person.

The stage policeman has always been a buffoon, or at least, a very low comedian. Usually he hasn't got the intelligence of an Australian bushman. Now he must know more than that or he couldn't dodge the trolley cars or direct traffic or find the station house after he had gone around the block. So Harrison Hunter came along and changed the styles in theatrical cops to something more in keeping with real life.

MUST BE EFFICIENT.

When anybody writes a detective drama now he always thinks immediately o. Hunter for the part of the stage bull. And the funny part is that the Harrison Hunter bull was evolved, not from observation of the police of different cities, but from plain common sense.

"I have never met detectives or policemen socially or in a business way," dcelares Hunter. "It stands to reason that they must be reasonably efficient or they wouldn't keep crime as inactive as they do.'

As Mr. Hunter puts it, the man he would fear most is the man who could most easily wrest a secret from him.

HOW LIES THRIVE.

The man who is the easiest to deceive is the man who is aggressively antagonistic. Lies, in Mr. Hunter's opinion, thrive most on opposition.

"If you ever set out to tell a fib," said Mr. Hunter one time, in a discussion as to his method of arriving at a charterization. "you'll find that you will tell a much better one if the other chap doesn't believe you. His opposition or antagonism seems to stimulate your imagination and what set out to be just a nice little white lie turns out to be a whopper. And it's usually a good one.

"That was the theory I had in mind in working out my stage detective. Just agree with everything you hear and keep your own counsel.

A GOOD THEORY.

"It was a good theory in the making but once or twice I found myself in direct conflict with the author. You see, most of the people who write stage detective characters have in mind the conventional sort—the kind who bluster and threaten. That didn't agree with my idea at all and usually there was an argument. Eventually they would let me have my own way, certain in their own minds that I was wrong. Afterwards, however, they were always kind enough to come around and admit they might have been mistaken

"Just remember, though, if you really are fibbing, keep your eye on the chap who seems to agree with all you're saying. He's likely to prove annoying some later day."

HARVARD-OXFORD DEBATE TONIGHT

In Symphony Hall tonight at 8:15 the Universities of Harvard and Oxford will meet for the first time in history in a public debate on "The League of Nations," Oxford to advocate and Harvard to combat the immediate entrance of this country into the league.

The Oxford team comprises Edward Marjoribanks, the president, a Conservative; M. C. Hollis, a Liberal, and Kenneth Lindsay, who is an active force in the English Labor party. All three are personally enthusiastic for the cause.

CLERGY OPPOSE MOVIE THEATRE

Protest against the erection of a motion picture theatre was voiced by the clergy of St. Clement's Church, South Medford, at all masses. Ground for the building has already been broken and the work of putting in the foundation will begin this week.

First Symphony Program

Pierre Monteux has compiled the program for the opening pair of Boston Symphony concerts, to be given in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. Berlioz' Fantastic Symphony, a theme with ten variations by Enrico Bossi, the celebrated living Italian composer, and Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" will be given.

Elman Program

Mischa Elman, the Russian violinist, has returned and will open the Sunday afternoon concerts in Symphony Hal on October 15, at 3:30 p. m. His program comprises: Handel's Sonata in D major, Vieuxtemps' Concerto No. 5 in A minor, Bach's Chaconne for Violin, unaccompanied, Romantic Suite by Korngold, a Nocturne by Chopin and Jota, Sarasate.

Find 3 Little Boys in Pitiful State

NEIGHBORS COMPLAIN TO POLICE

Grandfather Who Gave Noisy Parties, Attended by Women, Is Arrested

Three little boys were pitifully neglected, according to the police, and may be turned over to an institution for proper care as the result of the arrest of their grandfather, David Hill of Glenwood road, Peabody, where the children were found.

They are Albert, Howard and Walter Jones, aged 5, 7 and 9 years respectively. They were found cuddled together on the piazza of their grandfather's camp covered by a single blanket while the rain fell upon them.

According to the police, the little chaps were in a bad condition on account of neglect.

The grandfather was charged with drunkenness.

His arrest came as the result of complaints of neighbors that the man had entertained other men and women and that the parties were unusually noisy.

The first thing that the police noticed on arrival was the pitiful condition of the little boys. The officers said it was many days since their hands and faces had known soap and everything about them indicated lack of care.

An investigation was begun by Miss Mangan, Lynn police matron, to determine what is best for the children's welfare.

"Doctor" Exposed

SHIGETOMI TERANISHI.
DR. GEORGE K. HASHIBER.

Teranishi posed for three years as Dr. Hashiber of San Francisco. He was exposed by a physician in the Psychopathic Hospital who knows Dr. Hashiber well.

JAP, POSING AS DOCTOR, IS EXPOSED

A college friendship between a Japanese and an American physician resulted in the exposure and arrest of Shigetomi Teranishi, a Japanese drug addict, at the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, who for three years had posed as Dr. George K. Hashiber of San Francisco.

He was held in $1,000 today by Federal Commissioner Hayes for hearing October 16 on charges of buying, selling and having morphine.

Teranishi, who the police say, had obtained large quantities of drugs through the use of counterfeit prescriptions, is also believed to have passed many worthless checks on Boston hotels.

WORKED FOR RUBBER MAN.

The Japanese, who appears to be well educated, told officials he was a friend of M. M. Converse of North Andover, rubber goods manufacturer, but investigation revealed that he had merely been employed in the Converse household as a domestic.

The police were informed that Teranshi, then a travelling salesman, mecame acquainted with Dr. Hashiber, a prominent physician in San Francisco in 1919. Teranishi obtained some of the physician's cards, and then began a tour of the country, using Dr. Hashiber's name.

Through counterfeit prescriptions he purchased morphine from wholesale druggists in large quantities, and is thought to have sold considerable in addition to what he consumed himself.

It was his custom to obtain a receipt for his bill on checking out of a hotel, this receipt being used for identification in other cities. On reaching the East Teranishi, who is said to have a wife and daughter in New York, joined the Nippon Club.

POSED AS HARVARD MAN.

Later he had a photograph taken as a Harvard graduate, and claimed to have studied medicine at Harvard.

Because of his excesses in the use of drugs, Teranishi was confined in the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Middlesex Hospital and the Cambridge Relief Hospital. At the Cambridge Hospital he attempted to leave without making payment, and created a scene when prevented from doing so. He was then removed to the Psychopathic Hospital, where he continued to pose as Dr. Hashiber. As it happened, one of the hospital staff was a classmate of Dr. Hashiber, and he exposed the imposter.

CITY AIDS CHAMBER FIGHT

Mayor Urges Order for $2,500 to Smash Differential Freight Rates

Mayor Curley today sent an order to the City Council for $2,500 to be transferred from the city reserve fund to the Maritime Association of the Chamber of Commerce for expenditure by that organization to smash the unfair freight differentials against this port.

This is the second time the Mayor has granted the chamber's request for aid. Last March he gave it a like amount.

The Mayor sent a communication with his order to the council saying:

"The industrial future of New England and the happiness of the people is dependent in a large measure upon the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the matter of differentials.

"At the present time a flat rate obtains along the entire Pacific Coast west of Chicago, while a favored rate obtains for all maritime cities on the Atlantic Coast with the exception of New England and New York. New York, being the terminus for many of the railroad trunk lines, has not been seriously affected by the discriminatory system.

"The effect on New England, however, has been disastrous, owing to the fact that it is impossible for foreign shipping to secure ballast cargo, with the result that our export trade has practically been destroyed and we have become largely a port of call.

"The justice of our claim for equity in rates is such that properly presented no fair-minded jury can decide our case adversely."

LEGION DELEGATES TO SAIL TO CONCLAVE

William Doyle

Plans are being made by the Massachusetts State delegation to the national convention of the American Legion at New Orleans, October 16-20, for an ocean cruise to that port under the direction of Commander William H. Doyle. A feature of the convention will be a "States dinner" at a private club in New Orleans at which each table will be arranged as States, geographically.

In preparation Doyle will be given a rousing send-off by his home post at Malden, where he will be feted tonight.

GIRL STABS HERSELF AT PARTY

Admirer Is Wounded While Trying to Save Young Woman in Back Bay

Screams of women, coming from an apartment at No. 47 Batavia street, Back Bay, at an early hour in the morning, caused neighbors to send hurried calls for the police.

Unable to get inside, the officers climbed a fire escape and forced their way in through a window. In the apartment they found a young married woman who had been stabbed several times in the breast, and a young man, said to be her sweetheart, with knife wounds in one hand.

The injured woman is Mrs. Bernice Kelley, who was awarded a prize last summer in a bathing beauty contest. She is in the City Hospital with a number of serious wounds, which are said to have been self-inflicted.

In the hospital with her is Edward Mahoney of No. 293 Dorchester street, South Boston. The thumb and little finger of his right hand were nearly severed, it is alleged, when he tried to take a knife away from Mrs. Kelley.

The party included, according to the police, Mrs. Kelley, Mahoney, Miss Grace Davis, who roomed with Mrs. Kelley in suite 3 in the Batavia street house, and another man, who fled when the police arrived, and who is now being sought in the hope that he can give more information on the affair.

Although Mrs. Kelley told the police she is single, they insist that she is married. They declare that until a week ago she worked in a downtown restaurant, and women at the place said she has a child.

JUDGE FREES GIRL DRIVER OF DEATH CAR

Miss Mollie Cohen, unlicensed driver of the death car which fatally crushed Elizabeth Hannabury against a Minot street building, was discharged by Judge Murray in the City Court today on complaints of manslaughter and operating an automobile so as to endanged pedestrians.

Her brother Frank, who was on the front seat with his sister and who also lacks a driving license, was also discharged.

Miss Cohen was fined $15 for operating without a license. On the manslaughter charge Judge Murray said that he did not see from the evidence where the girl was criminally guilty.

The Cohens life at No. 1067 Blue Hill avenue. She is twenty-three and had been driving about three weeks. She was driving friends to the North Station.

When Miss Cohen turned into Minot street she lost control. The car hit the left-hand curb, veered over the other curb, mounted the sidewalk and pinned Elizabeth Hannabury to a building front, so that she died a few days later.

LODGER TRIES TO DIE BY GAS

A lodger attempted suicide by inhaling gas at No. 20 Green street, West End, today.

Although he wore civilian clothes, credentials in his pockets led police to believe he is Chester C. Taylor, a sailor aboard the U. S. S. Eagle. One gas cock was wide open, the windows were sealed with paper and the door of the room was locked.

At Haymarket Relief Station doctors say the man will recover.

The Leyland line freighter Novian from Barrow brought in 5,000 tons, and the Baron Lovat, another Britisher, brought 3,800 tons. All the cargo is consigned to New England foundries. The Baron Lovat brought also 4,400 tons of coke.

DR. ABRAMS EXPLAINS THEORY OF MACHINE TO HUB DOCTORS

Fifty years from now—or earlier—

A blue light and you have cancer; yellow, and it's tuberculosis. It's coming.

No less an authority than Dr. Albert Abrams, the San Francisco scientist who has taken a whole medical world by the ears by his theory of Electronic Reactions of Abrams, says so.

The man who is perfecting the Abrams method of diagnosis—that which has superseded in accuracy any hitherto disclosed in medical history—says the time is coming when an electrical device carrying out the principle of electronic reactions will show you the diagnosis of your malady for one cent. At least, it's possible.

The dynamic little Jewish scientist, who has made San Francisco the mecca of scientists from all parts of the world, is in Boston today meeting Boston physicians, who are taking advantage of his visit to acquaint themselves with his remarkable discovery.

CANCER CURABLE.

Cancer is within the grip of medical science, Dr. Abrams asserted today, and may be definitely cured if taken within a reasonable length of time. This hopeful message, Dr. Abrams declared he was ready to offer in spite of the fact that cancer is now taking a toll of one life in every ten.

Cancer, tuberculosis—and other malignant diseases—asserts Dr. Abrams, are in practically every case merely symptoms of another condition—congenital sex disease.

"We must get away from the fear of sex disease and its present association," Dr. Abrams told a group of physicians. "Nearly everyone has some trace of this disease, the heritage of civilization from the dark ages when there was no morality.

Dr. Abrams' oscilloclast was the object of considerable inquiry by local medical men and students who have heard of its fame. This device is the one by which the atoms of cancer or tuberculosis or sex disease—after a correct diagnosis has been made—can be transformed into the atoms of some other substance.

A child, by a treatment by the oscilloclast, is ridden of every trace of congenital sex disease and is therefore freed from a condition which gives birth to cancer and the major diseases, declares Dr. Abrams.

TO PURIFY RACE.

A group of Abrams' pupils have founded in San Francisco an International Association for Racial Purification, to which Abrams, himself, has pledged the sum of $50,000. The purpose of the organization is to advocate that every child, upon entering school, shall be examined by the electronic blood test, and treated before the ravages of disease have made headway.

Backed in his findings by leading medical scientists who have gone to the Abrams laboratory in San Francisco to study his methods and lend him their support, Dr. Abrams has thrown down the gauntlet to a conservative world of medicine by announcing that a new era in medical science is approaching.

Sir James Barr, former president of the British Medical Association and a fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, and Dr. Mather Thompson are among the British physicians to introduce the Abrams concept to England, where the fame of Dr. Abrams has attracted a great bulk of eager physicians.

Local interest in a discovery that has made Western America the centre of interest in the greatest medical controversy in history, has been excited following the announcement that a New York millionaire has offered the use of a half-million-dollar building for the use of physicians of the Abrams theory.

FOR 500 PATIENTS DAILY.

The philanthropist, who for the present wishes his name to be unknown, has offered to equip the building for the accommodation of 500 patients a day. Dr. Francis A. Cave, of Boston, stated today that a clinic on the proportions suggested by the New York financier would be impossible at present, due to the lack of trained practitioners of the Abrams method.

The donor of the building gave as his reason for doing so, the fact that he was thoroughly impressed by the enthusiasm of patients whose cases have been successfully diagnosed and treated by the Abrams method.

The offer of the New York man is interpreted by Eastern medical men as recognition on the part of the American laity of a new step in medical science which the American Medical Association has refused to recognize.

Despite the regret which this refusal has caused in American medical circles, hundreds of graduates of medical colleges are flocking to the laboratories of Dr. Abrams and his teachers in the large cities throughout the country.

LONG DISTANCE DIAGNOSIS

By his application of the theory of electronic reactions, Dr. Abrams diagnoses the disease of the patient together with the latter's sex and race—while the patient is thousands of miles away.

A drop of blood from a man, woman or lower animal, will be classified with respect to both species and sex together with the race of the subject if it be human. In the thousands of specimens sent to him in the last two years by physicians, individuals and persons anxious to "call" his bluff, the little Jewish scientist has rarely failed to return a correct classification and diagnosis. Doubting physicians have sent specimens only to his themselves to the feet of the little Jewish genius when they received his diagnosis.

In addition to determining the sex and disease of the patient, Dr. Abrams is able to declare the exact spot or area on the patient at which the disease has localized. By the current from oscilloclast, the atoms of the disease are transformed into atoms of another substance.

Dr. Abrams further astonishes the medical world by announcing that there is a bovine syphilis—a more virulent form than that confined to humans. It is transmitted to man, he declares, through impure serum from an animal previously inoculated from a diseased person.

LLOYD WILL GIVES BEQUESTS TO CHARITY

The will of Miss Anna Lloyd of Newton was filed for probate at the Dedham court today. Most of her fortune goes to charity.

A large sum was also left to enable Rev. S. J. Dainin to carry on the work of relief to persons afflicted to leprosy. There were also a number of private bequests.

The value of the estate is not known.

She bequeathed $300 each to the following: Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital of Wellesley; St. Joseph Home for Orphans, Jersey City; Home for Destitute Children, Boston; Little Sisters of the Poor, Boston; $200 to the St. Joseph Seminary of Baltimore and $100 to the St. Gregory Church of Dorchester.

KELLY, SINGLED OUT FOR GOAT, PROVES HERO OF BIG SERIES

HUGGINS PULLED BONE IN ORDERS TO BUSH

BY NICK FLATLEY.

New York, Oct. 9.—Fate's irony shuffled long George Kelly in the hero role as the Giants won the World's Series of 1922—long George, who had fanned and fanned in these classic games of the past two Falls, until he looked as helpless with a bat in his hands as any flapper might.

The sarcastic "oo-oo-oo's" of the Yankee rooters greeted him as he came to the plate in the eighth inning of a showery October Sunday afternoon. The bases were filled because Miller Huggins had vetoed any pitching at the dangerous Pep Young, after two Giants had whanged out hits.

Long George was framed for the dumb-bell role. Bullet Joe Bush, a season's greatest pitcher, could surely get him. Joe had screeched when Young had to be put on there, and perhaps the sense of protest impaired the steadines of his aim, the cunning of his arm.

Long George had been swinging as uselessly and ridiculously at curves and low balls as the pathetic Babe Ruth himself and Bush shot one right through the heart of the plate. The long Kelly war club swished, the ball went on a dazzling line past shortstop, two runs rollicked across the saucer, and the Giants were champions of the world once more.

They beat the Yanks this time, 5 to 3, the southpaw, Arthur Nehf, outpitching the "bulleter" easy, proving, as have all the McGraw hurlers, that the weakness of the sharpshooting was just some of the idle conversation that clutters up this baseball classic.

The Giants, a more alert and courageous club than the rival American Leaguers, had the upper hand throughout the five games were so superior in fact that New York is still gasping and wondering how it all happened.

These new champions now join the famous Braves of 1914 in the chronicles, as a team that went undefeated through a series. They won four games with a tie thrown in for good measure. Stallings' great team did it without the hesitation stuff.

Get More Money Individually Than Any Other Title Winners

These new champions get more money individually than any other title winners did and they earned it. They were over the other fellows like a tent all the time, and their speed and gameness eventually wore the hearts right out of the Yankees.

Even in that last game when they had the lead, the American League representatives did not act as though they thought they could hang on. They were knocked out cold in yesterday's pastime, and yesterday's affair merely resembled the referee counting the figures off.

All those Giants are fitted for the chaplets that are metaphorically draped around their corrugated brows when they receive their checks, but three of the infielders will be remembered as the birds who stumbled the enemy at all critical junctures, the chaps who injected the hits when the runs were glued to the bases, loudly paging rescue.

Bancroft, Frisch and Groh Superstars in Nervous Grind

Bancroft, Frisch and Groh were superstars through the nervous grind of the past hectic week, flashing across the film of the series with a regularity that might have grown monotonous but for its brilliance.

Little "Banny" made an error that helped the Yanks to tie up Thursday's fracas, but he turned in a bunch of plays that kept the victory edge safe in all the other jousts. Heinie Groh hit harder than any other athlete, and was a thing of beauty and inspiration down around that third bag. Frankie Frisch, a mere baby as baseball regulars go, was a wonder in the field, the finest and steadiest second baseman we have watched in quite a stretch of baseball, and he was always a threat at the bat, and on the bases.

Long George of course, sticks up as the climatic figure, but the best you can give him for that is to forget some of the efforts that went before.

Nehf, Barnes, McQuillan and Scott all pitched winning, stout-hearted baseball, with the big Carolinan turning in by far the most sparkling account. His game was a masterpiece. Nehf was only hit safely five times yesterday, but he had to wiggle through half a dozen pinches, while the now noted castoff wasn't even nervous.

Even "Rosy" Ryan made himself very useful by the efficient way he held that first game in, and he more than deserved the victory that ushers him into the records.

The Yankees were the same ball club that had so much trouble beating the Red Sox. Their tough battle, in their own league, wore down their resistance, wearied their muscles, and exhausted their courage. They were in a slump, and they never could get out of it.

They tossed away the Saturday game by wretched base running, and they exploded an opening for a big inning when the ultimate chance [illegible] them yesterday by just the same weakness. The pep and speed [illegible] the Giants had the other boys rushing and hurrying, the breaks [illegible] against them because of that [illegible] thing and they must wait another year to shoot after the perch on baseball's pinnacle.

The athletes who used to win the series for the Red Sox can't do it for the Yanks. Carl Mays has lost a lot of his effectiveness, Everett Scott is starting down the hill beyond the crest of his glory; the old spirit and perhaps the driving power isn't around any more.

Shouldn't Blame Little Miller for the Yankees' Bones

To put things briefly, the baseball genius of McGraw has triumphed. He taught his team his baseball; he had his pitchers work it. The Giants knew what they were about at all times; their confidence in the directing presence on the bench helped them in their dazzling surge to quick glory. Against that, the Yanks did not seem to pull with Huggins.

Little Miller should not be blamed for the bone plays his expensive athletes pulled. He can't get them to the bases. But he'll get the panning. As our friend, the crystal gazer, would say, the signs indicate a new manager next year.

BOB MARTIN MADE BLIND BY BLOW

New York, Oct. 9.—Bob Martin, the A. E. F. boxing champion, it was stated, would be blind for the next four or five weeks as the result of the boxing match in Madison Square Garden, Friday night, where he was stopped in the tenth round by Floyd Johnson, the San Francisco heavyweight.

Martin was operated on after the bout. It was found he had suffered a hemorrhage of the left eye and it was necessary to take a stitch inside the eye as well as six outside it. The blow and the blood had destroyed the sight.

Giants' Billie Boy Mascot Has Yanks' Billie Goat

Little Willie Craig is the happiest kid in the country today. He is the official mascot of the world's champion Giants and one of McGraw's most reliable performers. The youngster was in every play during the big series.

Giants Won Series as Predicted

By THE CRYSTAL GAZER.

The Giants won as I predicted they would. The luminous sphere did not go wrong. It foretold the right result.

I prophesied that it would be a battle between Nehf and Bush on Saturday, but Huggins took a chance on the submarine deliverer, Carl Mays, and McGraw saw an opportunity to prove that the $100,000 he gave to the Braves for Hughie McQuillan was money well invested.

But I said that in their second meeting Southpaw Art would outpitch Bullet Joe just as he did in the opening of the classic.

He did yesterday.

What more could the fan ask?

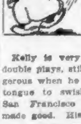
It was ordained to happen and the stars revealed it to me. The sphere of limpid glass held the secret, and I interpreted it.

GIANT LEADER SHOWED THE OLD BRAINWORK

By SAM CRANE.

New York, Oct. 9.—Well, the 1922 World's Series is over. The Giants came out with flying colors. They won the final game, 5 to 3.

The last game, too, was a contest, the same as the others. The Giants again came through with a rally in the eighth inning and smothered their opponents, as they did in the first game, when Arthur Nehf and Joe Bush were also the opposing pitchers.



The Giants this season have had the habit of coming from behind, bunching their hits and thereby piling up enough runs to win. This they did yesterday.

George Kelly was the boy who clinched the victory for his side. With the bases full, after Young had been purposely passed with but one out, George made good. He won the victory by smashing one of Bush's deliveries safely to centre, on which Frank Frisch and Meusel rode home with the winning runs.

Kelly is very liable to hit into double plays, still he is always dangerous when he has the old wagon tongue to swish. This time the San Francisco giant more than made good. His stinging safe wallop to centre sent in the necessary tallies to put the McGraw clan in the lead. Then Lee King's rather fluky single to short left scored Ross Young with the run that further clinched the game.

Every contest of the five played during the series was most bitterly fought. They were all thrilling classics. None of the five games played was won until the last man at bat had been retired.

Although the Giants won four straight, with one tie game sandwiched in, every time the teams met there was a struggle that held the thousands of spectators spellbound. Not a person left the grounds until the final result was reached each day.

There never was a World's Series played in which there was better or more sensational fielding exhibited. The games were replete with spectacular incidents. Brilliant fielding and timely hitting were on tap all the time.

Those who paid admission in the expectation of seeing Babe Ruth come through with his great home run specialty were disappointed. Babe in all five games only hit the ball out of the diamond twice. In the first game he doubled and in Saturday's game he gave Bill Cunningham the chance to make a catch that was historical.

The attendance at the five games has also made baseball history.

GIANTS WERE BETTER TEAM THAN YANKS

By WAITE HOYT.

New York, Oct. 9.—The nightmare is over. The Giants were a better team than the Yankees, that's why we didn't win one game of the series. It's a bitter pill to swallow—it's brutal.

I don't even like to talk about it—but I went to review the game briefly, especially that eighth inning.

Joe Bush was certainly in a hole when Young came to bat. Joe told me after the game that he was confident he could have disposed of Ross, but orders are orders in baseball, or any other kind of business, and when Huggins said "pass him" there was nothing else for "Bullet" to do.

I know just how Joe felt, for I have been in that position many times. I think he lost confidence when Kelly faced him. So when Long George cracked out a single which brought in two runs I wasn't surprised.

I am not criticizing Huggins. His judgment was probably right—but I want to tell you it's disheartening when you want to do one thing and must do the other.

Throughout the series we had good pitching. As a matter of fact the game I twirled in an ordinary series would have been a victory. The same goes for Mays and Bush. It was simply a case of "too much Giants." Little more can be said.

It cannot be denied that Babe Ruth was the series' biggest disappointment from our and the spectators' point of view. It was a case of the big bam trying too hard. I think and no one can deny that he tries hard every minute he is on the field. Ruth probably feels his slump during the series more than anyone else.

We did not play the kind of ball during the series that we did when we won the pennant. I certainly thought we would come out of our slump, but we didn't, getting only five hits.

It's tough to have so much depending on such a short series.

Pipp's work during the series certainly stands out in bold relief. He hit often and timely and his fielding was faultless.

Ward's two homers furnished the biggest thrills. Aaron played great ball and I look for him to be the sensation of the league next year.

Scott was not quite up to par but he played a great game nevertheless. Dugan was all over the infield with his flashy fielding and he also hit well. Witt, Bob Meusel and Schang played good ball at times.

But somehow, we didn't seem to play together — certainly we did not take advantage of all our opportunities, so the result was obvious. The Giants played better baseball.

We got a good break when Meusel slid home under Snyder. Bob would have been out easily had Frank held the ball, but he didn't—and that gave us a one run lead. The way "Bullet Joe" was going at the time that run seemed very large—but it was not, as later events proved.

Personally, I hate to "play over" lost ball games. I am looking forward to next year, when I certainly think we figure to repeat and win the pennant. I certainly feel sorry for Colonels Ruppert and Huston, for they had their heart set on a world's champion flag flying from the new grounds.

I leave Saturday for Japan, and believe me sincerely, I'm not going to even think of the World's Series of 1922, not once.

Ward and Scott the Two Heroes of Big Series

Each club had its hero. Aaron Ward, second baseman, was the Yankees' because he hit two home runs during the series, made several difficult stops and was in the midst of most of the sparkling double plays made by the Americans. The work of John Scott, Giant pitcher, stood out as the greatest bit of individual work. A peculiar feature about Ward was that his two homers were his only hits.

For third teams	24,730.98

[The Giants and Yankees receive 75 per cent. of the players' share, amounting to $185,482.36. This is divided 60 per cent., $111,289.42, to the winners, and 40 per cent., $74,192.92, to the losers. Thus, figuring on 25 full shares for each club, each Giant will receive $4,451.57, and each Yankee will get $2,967.71 for his work in the series.

The players on the second team in each league—the Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Browns—will divide 15 per cent. of the entire players' share, amounting to $37,096.47. Ten per cent., $24,730.98, will be split among the third teams—the Pirates and Cubs, who tied in the National League, and the Tigers in the American.]

M'GRAW WANTS JUST ONE MORE PENNANT

By SID MERCER.

New York, Oct. 9.—John J. McGraw has one more ambition to achieve before he can retire as a baseball leader because there are no more worlds to conquer.

He wants to win one more World's Series and then he will undoubtedly stand out as the smartest and most resourceful baseball general of all time.

McGraw and Connie Mack have each won three of the big October classics. McGraw has been through seven of these inter-league wars, and by defeating the Yankees for the second time he takes his place with Mack as a trophy getter and with Mack, Chance and Carrigan as leaders who have won two world's championships in succession.

Mack has practically no chance to get into the next World's Series. McGraw is constantly replacing old parts in his baseball machines, and he has every prospect of making the Giants winners of the world's championship for three consecutive years. It will be a long, long time before another McGraw comes along.

In his twenty years as a National League manager McGraw has won eight penants. He has been a good loser in four World's Championship engagements. The series of 1912, for instance, was as tough a blow to the Giants as the loss of four straight is to the Yankees. Yet McGraw masked his feelings beneath a smile as he walked across the field and congratulated Jake Stahl.

McGraw Always Observed Ethics of Good Sportsmanship

There is one thing about McGraw; he always played the game hard but when he lost he observed all the ethics of good sportmanship. To a loser he was always generous in extending his sympathy.

When the last play was made in this amazing World's Series, Miller Huggins, who went down coaching at third base, led the dash of his players to the club house. McGraw, a moment or two later, stepped out of the Giants' dugout. He was not in uniform but he didn't proceed twenty feet before he was surrounded by a cheering mob of fans. Special police had to form interference for him on his way to the club house.

Had it been McGraw coaching at third base when the blow fell he would have been one of the first to offer his congratulations to Huggins. As a victor it was his right to expect public felicitations from the manager of the Yankees. The congratulations were delivered, but they were delivered back stage after the crowd had melted away.

Col. Ruppert Congratulates Giants at Open House

In the last analysis of the series there is much to be said in praise of the Giants and in condemnation of the Yankees. It is not taking anything away from the Giants to say that their American League rivals played the dumbest baseball ever seen in such an important set of games.

Many breaks of the game went against them, 'tis true, but they made breaks for the Giants. The National League champions also made breaks for themselves and with wonderful precision took advantage of the many sloppy plays the Yanks were guilty of.

It wasn't the difference in pitching that impressed the fans as much as the fact that the Giants outsmarted the Yanks all the way through. The Hugmen were shown up as just nine men playing individual ball. The Giants are a team.

Huggins Weakness Was in Direction of Motley Crew

There has been much criticism of Huggins, practically all of it unwarranted. Theoretically Huggins made few mistakes. His weakness lay in the fact that he merely directed a motley, hap-hazard crew of ball players; McGraw had nine men on the field every day playing HIS brand of baseball.

HE EVEN PITCHED THE GAMES.

The great fault in the Yankees ensemble lays in lack of cohesion among the players and lack of confidence in Huggins. The Giants look up to McGraw as a leader; the Yankees constantly disagree with Huggins. He is simply the victim of a system that was all wrong from the start.

In losing the World's Series the Yankees made so many pitiable blunders that McGraw, had he been their manager, would probably have fined certain players their entire share of the prize money. Huggins is not that kind of a manager.

Undoubtedly Jawn's Greatest Achievment in Baseball

A victory over the Yankees, without the loss of a game, is undoubtedly McGraw's greatest achievement in baseball. The Giants should have won the tie game, too, but McGraw cannot prevent errors.

In the accomplishment of this brilliant triumph, McGraw put a team in the field that out-hit, out-fielded, out-ran, out-pitched, out-gamed and out-smarted the Yankees. There was no department of play in which the National league champions did not excel.

Going into the series branded as the poorest championship team the National league ever had, the Giants were a stunning surprise. The Yankees probably made them look better than they really are, but the fact remains that they played real championship baseball.

It was even a more startling form upset than the series of 1914, when the Braves defeated the Athletics for the world's championship in four straight games.

The final game, at no time, was given up by the Giants. The big crowd sensed the Yankee defeat even though the American Leaguers led for one inning at the beginning of the game and again by the same margin in the seventh. Their last run, made possible by three of those lucky breaks that had been going to the Giants, was not a safe lead the way that Joe Bush was pitching. Huggins had warmed Shawkey up in an early round. We believe that Shawkey could have saved this game as he is crafty and resourceful.

ST. WILLIAMS WIN FROM THE JEFFRIES

The St. William's Catholic Club football team defeated the Jeffries team at McConnell Park, Savin Hill, 16 to 8. The game was attended by more than a thousand persons who took much interest in the fine work of both elevens despite the heavy rain which fell during the course of the game. O'Donnell, Halliday and Durant played a slashing game for the winners, while McMahon's all-round work for the losers was also a feature.

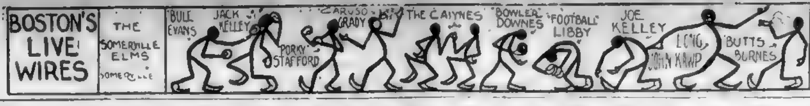
MALDEN LEGION TO GIVE DOYLE BANQUET

William H. Doyle, State commander of the American Legion, will be the guest of honor at a banquet to be given tonight by Post No. 69, American Legion chapter, at Malden. The Rev. Henry H. Crane, D. D., pastor of the Methodist Church of Malden, will act as toastmaster and James T. Williams, Boston newspaper man, will be the principal speaker.



SHEVLIN AND SHADE IN NEAR TITLE GO AT ARENA TONIGHT

WINNER WILL LIKELY GET BRITTON MATCH

By JACK CONWAY.

Shevlin or Shade?

You will have your answer tonight.

America's two leading contenders for the world's welterweight championship are ready for their ten round battle at the Boston Arena under the direction of the Arena A. C.

Both men have trained faithfully. They are fit for the test. No alibi will be offered by the vanquished. To the victor will go all the glory.

Shevlin or Shade?

We can hear the voices of thousands of boxing fans. They come from all parts of New England, from along New York's busy avenues, from the rural towns throughout the land, from every big city in the country and from distant California, where Shade is known and loved by every devotee of clean sport.

And the many voices join into one which possesses tremendous volume, but which is nevertheless as clear as the sparkling waters that one draws from a bubbling spring. And [illegible] one voice asks.

Shelvin or Shade?

Two finely trained athletes, supported by stout hearts, nimble feet, active minds and a knowledge of their particular game, will give the answer tonight.

Shevlin says he will win.

And he says it without any of that false conceit and egotism which is [illegible] to athletes.

Roxbury's favorite is not the type who makes claims about his own ability without deep deliberation. He would much rather not be called upon to discuss his own qualifications.

Shevlin has trained faithfully for tonight's quarrel. He is in as good condition as he was for George Ward. He has years of experience behind him. Furthermore, he has a record of always having fought at his best in the big tests. It has been the minor bouts that have caused Shevlin the most trouble.

Shade Has a Long String of Victories

And then we turn to Shade, youthful, quiet, unassuming.

And he tells us he will win.

"I have only lost one bout since I came East two years ago," said Shade. "That was my tussle with Frankie Schoell. I have fought fifteen rounds to a draw with Jack Britton. I know Shevlin is a great boxer and master ring general. But so am I. Besides, I have youth on my side. I feel confident it will win for me tonight."

Leo Flynn says as much for Shade.

Stop ten boxing fans on the street. Ask each what he thinks of the outcome of tonight's bout. Five will say Shade, five Shevlin.

Such is the way the conflict looks to the boys who pay the freight.

The Shevlin boosters will recall the Ward bout. The latter, one of the new welterweight sensations, was picked by the wise men to win. He went to the post a 10 to 7 favorite. For one round Ward justified the faith that the fans had placed in him. Then Shevlin started his surge. And it didn't stop until the bout had ended. It was a wonderful Shevlin victory.

Shevlin's brains give him the edge on most of his opponents. He always seems to do the unexpected. He thinks just a little bit faster than the other fellow.

It was believed that Shevlin would try to outbox Ward. This is why Ward was made a favorite. Instead Shevlin carried the battle to his opponent. Ward was unprepared for such a campaign. He was carried off his feet by the Shevlin rush. He became confused, made false moves, got himself into dangerous situations and was finally beaten badly.

Star Card of Prelims Arranged for Fans

Take a glance at Shade's record. You find that he has fought a fifteen-round draw with Jack Britton, beaten Nate Siegel and Paul Doyle and a great many other good heavyweights. Frankie Schoell has won a decision over him. Ryan of Cincinnati and Al Norton, recently knocked out in two rounds by Paul Doyle, have held him even.

It is difficult to conceive of a boxer who has held Britton even in a bout where the championship was at stake being beaten by Schoell. But that is what happened in Shade's case.

Shade has gone to all parts of the country, meeting whoever the promoters have cared to pit him against. And he has usually returned to his headquarters in New York with a victory and a substantial addition to his bank account.

If Shade defeats Shevlin tonight, he will be in a position to secure another bout with Britton to a decision.

Such an opportunity might gain for him a championship.

If Shevlin wins, he will be the young man to test Britton's mettle.

As we write the voice of the boxing fans of the country seems to increase in volume and clearness. And continues to ask:

Shevlin or Shade?

Time will give the answer.

The battle is only a few hours away.

Let's go that we may give to the voice the information it seeks.

* * *

There will also be three eight-round bouts at the Arena tonight. Johnny Morello of the same district. Johnny Fox of Woburn will oppose Young Kansas of Providence, while Rocky Smith of New York will take on Mike Paulson of St. Paul.

EAGLES' GUARDS AND TACKLES WEAK

Although Boston College defeated Boston University on Saturday, the line, with the exception of Heaphy and Comerford, had little share in the victory. The guards were especially weak, and the tackles did not play up to expectation.

This weakness in the line may be due to the fact that men now holding down the positions have not found themselves. Certainly, in the case of Bill Doyle, who played the pivot position so ably last Fall, this seems to be the only explanation.

The B. U. backs, many times broke through the B. C. line, proving that the B. C. defence can stand lots of improvement. Donaghue, who played guard opposite Doyle, is one of the two men in the line just out of Peabody High. It is natural to expect that it will take a little time before he can become a tight fitting cog in Cavanaugh's machine.

O'Connell played a good game on the Eagle's right wing, and shows promise of future improvement. If he develops along Comerford's lines he will become one of the strongest tackles in the line.

Comerford's work in the line stood out as prominently as Darling's did in the backfield. He was first man down the field under Darling's punts, always ready to tackle the player who received the ball. B. U. attempted very few plays around Comerford's position, as such plays never meant any substantial gains.

Jack Heaphy was somewhat battered in his valiant work frustrating the B. U. attack and considering that it was Jack's first game in two years, his performance was remarkable.

Charley [illegible]ellan, who stepped into quarter in the last period, led the 40 yard advance of the B. U. team. He showed good judgment in giving "Plaster" Ward the ball when he needed a few yards to make first down, as Ward is a man who can plough his way through the massed resistance of an opposing line.

While the B. C. backfield can still be polished up a bit, the big work for Coach Cavanagh in the next few days will be the strengthening of the line. The B. C. backfield needs better co-operation from the line if Boston College is to win victories in its future contests.

MISKE IS ON JOB FOR GIBBONS GO

New York, Oct. 9.—Billy Miske, of St. Paul, has arrived here to start training for his fifteen round bout with Tom Gibbons at the Garden, Friday night.

Billy Miske.

Gibbons will leave Chicago today, gathering up his training staff in the Windy City before leaving. Tom is anxious to show the fans that he did not put up his best battle against Harry Greb in the Garden last Winter, and by defeating Miske will look for another chance at the light-heavyweight title.

"Shade! That's our choice for the Arena bout tonight. It will be the toughest welterweight quarrel you have seen since the days when Jack Britton and Ted (Kid) Lewis were battling at the Arena.

"There'll be something in a name tonight. The Californian will win by a shade. Shevlin will try to make it a stand-up fight and won't have to coax Shade to get the latter to engage in an exchange of blows.

"Shevlin will rely upon his ring science and brains to offset Shade's wonderful speed and youth. But we think that Shade will nevertheless manage to outpoint his opponent.

"It will be a thrilling battle replete with sensations. Get to the Arena early and join in the cheering.

"We'll admit Shevlin has been our hoodoo. But we've named our selection and shall stand by it."

STECKER SIGNS UP TO MEET HANSON

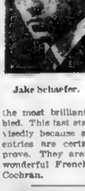
Omaha, Neb., Oct. 9.—Joe Stecker, Nebraska farmer boy, who ascended the Heights to the world's mat title and then lost to "Strangler" Lewis, has been signed to meet Charley Hanson, 1922 edition de luxe of "Farmer" Burns, and a pupil of the great master who developed Frank Gotch. The bout will be staked at the Omaha Auditorium, November 11, under the auspices of the American Legion.

Joe Stecker.

This match has been hanging fire for many months. It was originally scheduled for July 4, but an operation on Hanson forced its postponement. When negotiations were resumed Stecker informed Hanson he would have to beat McGill first. Hanson did this easily and there was no further excuse for Stecker to delay further. The bout is expected to be the best in the history of local wrestling.

SCHAEFER PICKED TO KEEP TITLE

Jake Schaefer has been made an 8 to 5 favorite to retain his title in the big international billiard tournament that opens next month in New York. So strong is Schaefer held in the esteem of the billiard fans that he is being made a favorite at false odds and since practically all of the public money will go on the champion he may even be a 2 to 1 shot over the most brilliant field ever assembled. This last statement is made advisedly because at least two of the entries are certain to greatly improve. They are: Roger Conti, the wonderful French boy, and Walter Cochran.



Jake Schaefer.

ARMORY PUTS OVER SHOW UNTIL FRIDAY

Owing to so many boxing shows being held in Boston so close to each other, the directors of the Armory Club and the managers of Jock Malone and Johnny Karr got together and decided that, for the benefit of all concerned, it would be beter to postpone the Malone and Karr match that was to be staged tomorrow night at Mechanics Building, to Friday night. This will allow the fans a few days' rest between shows, and give the boxers so much more time to get into perfect condition. The club also announces that tickets bought for Tuesday night will be good for Friday night's show.

HARVARD ELEVEN IS SMOOTH MACHINE

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

We rather think the regular Monday "bawling out" of the Harvard football squad will lack its wonted harshness this afternoon.

Gross errors in the individual and team play of Coach Fisher's young men may have transpired between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, but if so very, very few were discernible to the more or less schooled eye of your correspondent.

Of course the perfect game, from the coach's standpoint, is one in which each enemy play is tossed for a telling loss, while each play his own team employs ripples over the chalk-marked lawn for a touchdown. Such a game would prove a horrible thing to sit through and, possibly for that reason, such a game never has been played. Certainly such a game is not likely of realization when the opposing team hails from Holy Cross.

Cleo O'Donnell teaches, and the Holy Cross teams play, hard football. Saturday Holy Cross played very hard football, in fact there were two or three occasions in which Holy Cross players seemed to have overstepped the line that distinguishes hard play from unnecessarily rough, albeit the anvil chorus, which is so generous in hisses and hoots when Harvard players appear to offend, remained strangely quiet.

Confronting this very hard play and confronted by it, Harvard scored three touchdowns, registered ten first downs and made a total gain by rushing and forward passing of nearly 200 yards, while it held the Purple to no score and but a single first down, which, say we, is just about as perfect a performance under said circumstances as Coach Fisher and his aids could possibly expect.

Never Has Harvard Team Shown Such Improvement

Never in our recollection has a Harvard team, in the short space of one week disclosed such remarkable improvement in form, and never, in that selfsame recollection, has a Harvard team, in its second game, shown the finish, the impeccable smoothness of action, the exemplification, by individuals, of thorough mastery of football's fundamentals, and the ability to do the right thing at the right time and in the right manner.

Against Middlebury one week ago Harvard's faults were many and glaring: the tackle assignments were particularly poorly handled; the generalship was open to criticism; there was little co-ordination between line and backfield. But against Holy Cross, Eastman and Dunker, at the tackle posts, exhibited a quality of offensive and defensive play that was a treat to watch. Hubbard and Grew, especially the first named, proved wonderfully able guards: Kernan a far from weak centre, while Fitts and Hartley carried out the wing tasks very capably, and all combined ably with spirit in clearing the way when the Crimson backs were carrying the ball.

It would seem a vast amount of football was taught and a vast amount of football was learned at Cambridge last week, and that the problem of the Crimson coaches now is that of keeping the eleven keyed up to its fine brand of play of Saturday.

Notwithstanding the great defensive work of Hillary Hahaney and Golembeski, fullback and end on the Purple team, and the fierce charging of the Worcester line, Holy Cross could not successfully cope with the Crimson's well-ordered attack, the most prominent feature of which was an off-tackle charge on the right side of the Purple line.

Vast Amount of Football Learned at Harvard in Week

As for the Holy Cross offense which had featured the meetings of the two colleges in the past, Harvard did not grant it a single chance to get under way. Plays directed at the left of Harvard's line found Eastman storming through, shouldering two Holy Cross interferers backward upon their teammate who carried the ball.

Plays directed at other points were quickly broken up by Harvard linemen, thus enabling the ends or defensive backs to tackle Purple runners for losses or very meagre gains.

Holy Cross Rooters Say Breaks Went to Harvard

After the game Holy Cross rooters asserted that the "breaks" went to Harvard.

We take issue with the claim. Certainly there were no "breaks" in the Crimson's sturdy 65-yard march to its first touchdown. Nor do we consider the incidents leading to Harvard's subsequent scores to have been of that nature.

The Holy Cross team was sufficiently experienced to know that on a kickoff both teams are onside and eligible to recover the ball. Yet, after a Harvard kickoff, a half dozen Holy Cross players dumbly watched the ball bound around among them until a Harvard player fell upon it. Nor could the outright case of holding on the part of Simendinger, when Gehrke got off his surprise punt, be classified as a trick of fortune.

Princeton's Narrow Margin Victory a Surprise

Saturday, in football, was not without its surprises. The narrow-margined victory scored by Princeton over Tommy Campbell's Virginia team was one of them and the only one involving one of the more prominent institutions. To followers of New England football, however, Springfield's defeat of the galaxy of stars now wearing Vermont uniforms, and the vanquishing by lowly Wesleyan of the reputedly able Bowdoin outfit proved equally startling.

Yale, Dartmouth, West Point, Washington and Jefferson, Colgate and Brown were held to very low scores by North Carolina, Maine, Kansas, Bethany, Allegheny and Colby, respectively, while the other big fellers, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Annapolis, Syracuse, West Virginia and Penn State got away to easy victories by margins of 20 to 71 points. The single meeting of big [illegible], Lafayette and Pittsburgh, found the former a 7-to-0 victor by reason of a recovered fumble and a 37-yard run.

Boston College did the expected but not so impressively as anticipated when it triumphed over B. U., 20 to 6. There was revealed in that game undeniable strength and ability in the Maroon backfield as well as some neat end play, but between the wings much improvement must be made before B. C. tackles Fordham on Thursday of this week.

Penn State Grid Men Use Arc Lights for Practice

State College, Pa., Oct. 9.—Arc lights installed last year over the Penn State football practice field this year have been improved by the addition of reflectors and are seeing service every night. Late classes, coupled with the necessity for rebuilding the Penn State machine, have resulted in Coach Bezdek's burning them for an hour each evening.

ZBYSZKO AND KOTSONAROS ON BIG CARD

Boston will have its first big wrestling show of the season Thursday night, when the Old Howard management stages a banner offering at the Boston Arena.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, considered by many experts as the world's greatest grappler, will appear in the feature match with Ivan Linow as an opponent. This tussle will be to a positive finish, best two falls out of three.

Zbyszko has been a big winner in his Boston starts. His remarkable strength, weight and knowledge of the fine points of the mat game have enabled him to crush most of his opponents.

Another finish match will find George Kotsonaros, Greek light-heavyweight champion, battling with John Grandovitch. The latter is the toughest opponent Kotsonaros has agreed to meet since invading Boston. The Greek champion has won four straight matches at the Grand Opera House, but will have to display wonderful form to avert defeat at the Arena Thursday night.

DOUBLE SCHOOL BILL AT BRAVES FIELD

By FRED C. LANE.

Brighton High School's football team will continue its march to the district high championship today, playing South Boston High a part of the second double bill staged at Braves Field. Hyde Park Hig and Trade are also down for a dispute this afternoon, which shoul bring out the supporters of all four teams in great numbers.

It is the second double bill for the district high school lads. Although Brighton has a light assignment, there are other teams i the league which will make the going quite interesting for them i their effort to win the title again.

Hyde Park and Boston Trade are two teams of equal strength The Trade boys made a fine showing against Danvers High a wee ago. Holding Coach Barry's lads to one touchdown is an achievement worthy of mention.

The opening of the Suburban League, on Columbus Day, will start eight teams that have proved themselves real contenders for championship honors. In pre-scheduled games all eight have displayed enough talent to cause the most conservative supporters to look forward to a real quarrel this season.

Malden, Everett and Medford have taken part in one or more hectic contests and have come through with clean slates against big odds. Everett stands out.

Since taking the reins in hand, Coach George Brickley has dug this school out of the mire to a high place in the sun. Their opening game with Newton at the Garden City on the holiday will play an important part in the championship tilt.

Nothing has been left undone by fans in that city to bring a championship to Everett. Former school football stars have rallied to the cause. The boys show the effects of this training.

Somerville and Cambridge Latin will play at Russell Field and the contest should prove a great dispute. Rindge Tech will play at Malden High but so well have the Malden players met the issue that this contest can be listed as an easy win for Coach McDonald's boys.

Coach Jim Mansfield at Medford High has whipped together a real eleven. They are down to play at Brookline which shouldn't cause any great amount of worry on their part.

Boston College High with two defeats chalked against its record, will play its annual game with English High at Fenway Park. Dorchester will play Mechanic Arts on the same field, completing a double bill for th early risers.

Lynn Classical travels to Haverhill on the holiday to play Coach Bill Broderick's victorious outfit. If Lynn ever had the chance to score a victory over the Haverhill team this is the year.

The Lynn school has a stron team on the offence and defense. The boys displayed a number o trick plays and delayed passes that worked in clock like fashion on th Chelsea bunch.

BURRILL A. C. IS GRIDIRON WINNER

The Burrill A. C. of Roxbur defeated the St. Patrick's C. C. on the Shirley street playground, 6 [illegible] It was the hardest fought contest that either team has engaged in this year. The features were a [illegible] yard advance to the goal in the las quarter by the Burrills and a goal goal kick from the 30-yard line by Daley of St. Patrick's. Tom Kirby of the Burrills made a sensational touchdown in the last five seconds.

ST. MARY'S DEFEAT THE INDIANS

The St. Mary's team of East Boston, made an auspicious start in th football season when they defeate the strong Indian aggregation fro the same section.

Start This World-Famous Story Today

The story opens with an account of the Caskoden family, one of whom, Edwin—who tells the story of Princess Mary Tudor and Charles Brandon—holds a place at the court of Henry VIII. News of a terrible duel reaches the King. Of four combatants, only two come out alive, one so horribly disfigured that he might better have been killed. The survivor, Charles Brandon, is much talked about for his heroism. He appears at a tourney at Westminster. Mary begs the King to tell her his name. He refuses. Brandon meets Caskoden in London and they become friends. Brandon tells him his hopes and plans.

"I CANNOT believe the fault lies at my door, and I hope for her own sake that her highness, on second thought, will realize how ungentle and unkind some one else has been." And with a sweeping courtesy he walked down the path.

"The insolent wretch," cried one.

"He ought to hold papers on the pillory," said another.

"Nothing of the sort," broke in sensible, fearless little Jane. "I think the Lady Mary was wrong. He could not have known her by inspiration."

"Jane is right," exclaimed Mary, whose temper if short, was also short-lived, and whose kindly heart always set her right if she but gave it a little time. Her faults were rather those of education than of nature.

"Jane is right; it was what I deserved. I did not think when I spoke, and did not really mean it as it sounded. He acted like a man, and looked like one, too, when he defended himself. I warrant the Pope at Rome could not run over him with impunity. For once I have found a real live man, full of manliness. I saw him in the lists at Windsor a week ago, but the king said his name was a secret and I could not learn it. He seemed to know you, Jane. Who is he? Now tell us all you know. The queen can wait."

I had told Jane all I knew about Brandon, so she was prepared with full information, and gave it. She told the princess who he was, of his terrible duel with Judson, his bravery and adventures in the wars, his generous gift to his brother and sisters, and lastly, "Sir Edwin says he is the best read man in the court and the bravest, truest heart in Christendom."

After Jane's account of Brandon, they all started by a roundabout way for the mar le landing. In a few moments whom did they see, coming toward them down the path, but Brandon, who had d[illegible] red his message and [illegible] Wales. When he saw [illegible] he was about to [illegible] another gate [illegible]. The Lady Mary had seen him, however, and told Jane to run forward and bring him to her. She soon overtook him and said:

"Master Brandon, the princess wishes to see you." Then, hesita- [illegible] for this [illegible] It was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] thank her [illegible] [illegible] was [illegible] to [illegible] in her highness' command," he answered, "and do not care to go back for a reprimand when I am in no way to blame."

"Oh, but you must come, perhaps she will not scold this time," and she put her hand upon his arm, and laughingly drew him along. Brandon, of course, had to submit when led by so sweet a captor—anybody would. So fresh and fair and lovable was [illegible], that I am sure anything masculine must have given way.

Coming up to the princess and her ladies, who were waiting, Jane said: "Lady Mary, let me present Master Brandon, who, if he has offended in any way, humbly sues for pardon." That was the one thing Brandon had no notion on earth of doing, but he let it go as Jane had put it, and this was his reward:

"It is not Master Brandon who should sue for pardon," responded the princess. "It is I who was wrong. I blush for what I did and said. Forgive me, sir, and let us start anew." At this she stepped up to Brandon and offered him her hand, which he, stepping to his knee, kissed most gallantly.

"Your highness, you [illegible] offend [illegible] when you have so sweet [illegible] a [illegible] for making amends. A wrong acknowledged [illegible] one has [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and with a smile that brought the dimples.

"I thank you. That is a real compliment! Then [illegible]. Much better than extravagant compliments on one's skin and eyes and hair. We are going to the queen at the [illegible] you walk with us? And they strolled away together, while the other girls followed in a whispering, laughing group.

Was there ever so glorious a [illegible] after such a storm?

"I can't say that I have ever received many—none that I recall," replied Brandon, with a perfectly straight face, but with a smile trying its best to break out.

"Oh! you have not? Well! how would you like to have somebody always telling you that Apollo was humpbacked and misshapen compared with you, that Endymion would have covered his face had he but seen yours, and so on?"

"I don't know, but I think I should like it from some persons," he replied, looking ever so innocent.

This savored of familiarity after so brief an acquaintance, and caused the princess to glance up in slight surprise, but only for the instant, for his innocent look disarmed her.

"I have a mind to see," she returned, laughing and throwing her head back as she looked up at him out of the corner of her [illegible] eyes. "But I will pay you a better compliment. I positively thank you for the rebuke. I do many things like that, for which I am always sorry, [illegible] don't know how difficult it is to be a good princess."

"I know [illegible] to be good when everybody flatters even one's shortcomings," said Brandon, and then continued in a way that I am free to confess was something priggish. "It is almost impossible for us to see our own faults even when others are kind enough to point them out, for they are right ugly things and unpleasant to look upon."

Man and Maid

by Elinor Glyn

WELL—I was sitting in my chair feeling some kind of numb anguish—which I suppose those going to be hanged experience, when Burton brought in my tea—and I heard no sound of clicking next door. I asked him as naturally as I could if Miss Sharp had gone.

"Yes, Sir Nicholas," he answered, and the shock, even though it was expected, was so great that for a second I closed my eye.

I made myself light a cigarette and did not open it, and I made myself say casually:

"I'm afraid she feels her brother's death dreadfully, Burton?"

"The poor young lady, Sir Nicholas! She must have kept up brave like all the time this morning, and then after lunch when I come in—while you were resting, sir—it got too much for her, I expect, sittin' alone—for she was sobbin' like to break her heart—as I opened the door. She looked that forlorn and huddled up—give you my word, Sir Nicholas—I was near blubberin' myself."

"I am so awfully sorry. What did you do, Burton?"

"I said, 'Let me bring you a nice cup of tea, Miss.' It is always best to bring ladies tea when they are upset, Sir Nicholas, as you may know. She thanked me sweet like, as she always does—and I made so bold as to say how sorry I was, and I did hope she had not had any extra trouble to deal with over it; and how I'd be so glad to advance her her next week's salary if it would be any convenience to her—knowing funerals and doctors is expensive—out of my own money of course I gave her to understand—because I knew she'd be bound to refuse yours, Sir Nicholas.

"At that her tears burst out afresh. She had no glasses on and she looked no more than sixteen years old, give you my word, sir. She thanked me like as if it was something real kind I'd thought of; I felt sort of ashamed I could not do more.

"Then she seemed to be having a struggle with herself, just as if she'd rather die than take anything from anybody, and yet knew she had to. She turned them blue eyes in me streamin' with tears, and I had to turn away, Sir Nicholas, I had, really.

'Burton,' she says, 'have you ever felt that you wanted to be dead and alone with it all—that you couldn't fight any more?'

"'I can't say as I have, Miss,' I answered her, 'but I know my master feels that way often.' Perhaps she felt kinder sorry for you, too, Sir Nicholas, because as I said that she gave a sort of extra sharp sob and buried her face in her hands.

"I slipped out of the room then and brought the tea as quick as I could, you may believe me, sir, and by that time she had pulled herself together. 'It is stupid to have any proud feelings if you have to work, Burton,' she said. 'I will be grateful for the loan of your money,' she had her hat on, and such a friend' . . . and she put out her little bit of a hand, she did, Sir Nicholas, and I never felt so proud in my life. She's just a real lady to her finger tips, she is, sir. I shook it as gentle as I could, and then was obliged to blow my nose, I felt that blubberish. I left the room at once and when I come back for the tray and to bring the money, she had her hat on, and the note written for you, sir. I took the violets and began putting them in the box for her to take, but she stopped me.

"'Violets fade so soon—I will not take them, thanks,' she said. 'I have to do some shopping before I go home and I could not carry them.' But I knew it was not that. She did not want to take them—perhaps she felt she'd given up enough of her pride to take my money—for one day. So I said nothing—but that I did hope she would be feeling better by the time she came to apartment on Saturday. She did not speak, she just nodded her head and smiled kind like at me and went."

I could not answer Burton. I too, just nodded my head, and the dear old boy left me alone. My very heart seemed bursting with pain and remorse. When he had gone, I seized the letter and opened it.

"To Sir Nicholas Thormonde, Bart, V. C." (it began, and then) "Dear Sir:

"Circumstances [illegible] me to work so I [illegible] have to remain in your service, if you require me. I am unfortunately quite defenceless, so I [illegible] to whatever chivalry there [illegible] not to make it so impossible that I must again give in my resignation.

"Yours faithfully,

"A. SHARP."

I fell back in my chair in an agony of [illegible]. My darling! My queen!—whose very footprints I worship—to have had to write such a letter—to me!

The unspeakable brute beast I felt! All my cynical calculations about women [illegible] from me—I saw myself as I had been all day—utterly selfish—not really feeling for her grief, only making capital out of it for my own benefit. At that moment, and for the rest of the day and night, I suffered every shade of self reproach and abasement a man can feel. And next day I had to stay in bed because I had done some stupid thing to my leg in lying down without help.

When I knew I could not get into Paris by Saturday, when Alathea was to come to the flat, I sent Burton in with a note to the shop in the Avenue Mozart.

Dear Miss Sharp—(I wrote)

"I am deeply grateful for your magnanimity. I am utterly ashamed of my weakness—and you will not have called upon my chivalry in vain. I promise you. I have to stay in bed, so I cannot be at the flat, and if you receive [illegible] I shall be obliged if you will come out here again on Saturday. Yours very truly,

"Nicholas Thormonde."

Then I [illegible] with thoughts of [illegible] wondering if she would get it soon enough to come.

Over and over in my vision I saw the picture of her sitting there in Burton's room sobbing. My action was the last straw—my shameful action! Burton showed the good taste and the sympathy and understanding for her which I should have done. And to think that she is troubled about money, so that she had to take a loan from my dear old servitor—far greater gentleman than I am. And that I cannot be the least use to her and may not help her in any way. I can go on no longer in this anguish—as soon as I feel that peace is in the smallest measure restored between us—I will ask her to marry me, just so that I can give her everything. I shall tell her that I expect nothing from her—only the right to help her family and give her prosperity and peace.

Sunday.

I was still in bed on Saturday morning at eleven. The doctor came out to see me very early and insisted that I be kept quite still [illegible] Monday. So Burton [illegible] and all my papers and things. There had come a number of letters to answer and he had asked me if Miss Sharp could not do them as soon as she arrived.

"Burton, perhaps she'll feel not quite at ease with me alone in here like this. Could you not make some excuse to be tidying drawers and stay while I am dictating?" I [illegible]

"Very good, Sir Nicholas."

When he replies with those words I know that he is agreeing—with reservations.

"Out with what you are thinking, Burton."

"Well, Sir Nicholas"—and he coughed—"Miss Sharp is that understandin' she'd know in a minute your things wasn't likely to be in a mess and that you'd got me there on purpose. It might make her awkward like——"

Presently I heard Alathea in the [illegible] room and [illegible] went in to see her.

"[illegible] Nicholas is [illegible] to-day, Miss," I heard [illegible] say. "The doctor won't let him out of bed. I wonder if you'd be so kind as to take down [illegible] are too much for [illegible] to sit up, and I have not the time."

"I've [illegible] the table and everything ready—and I [illegible] you kindly," Burton went on. "I am glad to see you looking better, Miss."

I listened intently. It seemed as if I could hear her taking off her hat, and then she came into the room to me, but by that time my heart was beating so that I could not speak loud.

I said "good morning" in a [illegible] half voice and she answered the same. Then she came forward to the table. Her dear little face was very pale and [illegible] was [illegible] pathetic [illegible] of her lips. Her hands, I noticed, were again not so red.

"All the letters are there," and I pointed to the pile. "It will be so good of you if you will do them now."

She took each one up and handed it to me without speaking, and I dictated the answer. I had had one from Suzette that morning thanking me for the villa, but I was clearly under the impression that I had put it with the one from Maurice and one from Daisy Ryven at the other side of the bed, so I had no anxiety about it. Then suddenly I saw Alathea's cheeks flame crimson and her mouth shut with a snap, and I realized that the irony of fate had fallen upon me again, and that she had picked up Suzette's lavender-tinted, highly-scented missive. She handed it to me without a word.

The letter ended:

"Adieu Nicholas' [illegible]
Toujours Mon Adore

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—By ANN LISLE

"IF you are the right man for Irma—if you're big enough to win a girl like her [illegible] [illegible] I feel [illegible] I have [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] against [illegible] interfere [illegible] I flung out.

"It [illegible]. What then? What if Loren [illegible] asks you if I'm good [illegible] to be trusted with Irma? Will you stand sponsor for me? Will you?"

"I'm answered, Donna Anna. You believe in me, but not enough. Perhaps some day you'll have to make a d[illegible] on—to help me to my happiness or to take sides against me. Well, we'll see. Good night. I want to get out quickly. I've got a lot of thinking to do. I have an idea that Mrs. Booth isn't through with me quite yet."

On the morning after Carl Booth's announcement of his head long [illegible] age to Daisy Condon I came to my office in a state that Miss May would undoubtedly have described as being "all of a twitter."

Strangely enough—and for the first time since I've known her—Miss May wasn't ahead of me. This was so astonishing that it gave me a little uneasiness. But before I could stop to ponder over an explanation for her unusual tardiness the door opened and in marched Carl Booth.

"Good morning, Barbara Anne," he said, apologetically. "I dropped in on my way to the station. I've got a taxi chugging away outside. Can't afford more than fifteen minutes' worth of chug, so I won't—try your patience long."

His words were strangely at variance with the queer deep tim[illegible] [illegible] suggested [illegible]. He seemed to be trying [illegible] off the situation. I resented the fact that there should be an attempt to carry off [illegible]. I controlled the feeling of having [illegible] along my nervous system.

"Good morning, Carl," I said with elaborate [illegible] on your way to [illegible] and I know [illegible] [illegible] to tell you all over again [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

"You [illegible] Anne," [illegible] Carl.

"I know you'll be happy," I said a shade more positively than I [illegible]

"You don't think I've been faithless to any prior feelings?" asked Carl with a laugh that was a burlesque on the mirthful twist he seemed to think it gave to his question.

"Carl Booth, shall I take the bull by the horns, as an elegant quotation has it?" I asked.

"Meaning"——

"Shall I lay the ghost? Shall I be indelicate? Shall I haul out something to show you that there isn't anything to haunt anyone in any closet which might be supposed to contain a rattling skeleton?" I asked, trembling for my courage and bolstering it up with the most brazen frankness I could manage.

"Please," said Carl simply. "If you can."

"Well, lad, we're old friends. You big brothered me in my lonely days. Then I got married and you were too busy forging ahead splendidly to find yourself a substitute for Barbara Anne Lee. You thought Daisy Condon was a second little [illegible] but she was not. She was something very different to you [illegible] you didn't suspect it. Shall I go on?"

"Well—Daisy didn't get from you what she was unconsciously demanding from you. So while you were making good she went off and made good, too. And she idealized the man who helped her. In her loneliness she turned to him. In your loneliness you turned to your big sister, who'd come to be [illegible] again, too, and who made a roman[illegible] appeal to you because she was so sadly in need of aid and comforting and so at sea in her forgotten business world."

"WHO sent the letter, Mary?" The low whisper, vibrant with emotion, commanded me.

"Oh, Pat, I didn't. I never went back to Dawson—never once. I didn't get any of those telegrams. If you sent them there he must have opened them. Oh, I don't know. How could I send a thing like that after the letter I wrote to you!"

"What was in the letter, Mary?" The glad wisp of a smile broke over the tensity of his face. "What did you say? Tell me, do you love me now?"

Without moving, he waited. And I could only reach out my hands to him, repeating, "I never sent it."

"You didn't send it, Mary?" He took my hands, drawing me to him. "Oh, dear heart of God!" His arms closed about me. "Do you want me still? Tell me, oh, my life, do you love me?"

"I love you. Oh, Pat."

"You love me!" His voice bubbled, sank, laughed. "Say it again, say it a thousand times. Kiss me, oh, my love. . . ."

"You think Dawson did it, Pat? How could he dare?"

"He would dare anything to hurt me, Mary. He came to me that day before I left, got up from a sick bed to make a last attempt to cheat me out of the profits of the patent. He did, Mary—telling me he had a wonderful opportunity for me, and putting on the table a certified check for $20,000. When I wouldn't take it he went wild with rage, cursing, vowing to make me pay for the refusal. Then he said that thing I told you of—'You'll find I'm your master in other things as well!'"

"And you thought I could care for him. Oh, the agony of that night! I would have died rather than have suffered his arms around me. Why did you leave me then, Pat, without a word, when you knew my heart was breaking?"

"Ah, little pal, I didn't know your heart was breaking," his lips moved against my hair. "I'll never let it suffer a pang again, never, my little Witches' Eyes."

I put on my hat. We went downstairs.

"Yes, Adam triumphant."

He helped me into the car.

"When are we going to be married, Mary?"

"In a few months, Pat."

"Months! Days, you mean. Why should we wait? Why not tomorrow, darling, or at the latest, the day after?"

It was a week since the night of his return. Each evening he had come for me and we had gone for dinner, taking long rides about the country and down to Paragon Park.

And each night I had decided—"Now I will tell him," but each time, as I began to speak, his voice had throbbed in my ear or he had laughed, his arm tightening joyously on mine.

"Are you glad I'm back. Do you love me? How long would you have waited? Tell me. Tell me," he would say, his head bent down to mine.

"Tomorrow will be better, I will wait," I had weakly yielded, knowing that mine was not the strength to send him from me. Yet he would go. I was sure of that. My mind shrank before the vision of his angry eyes; the scorn on his young, resolute mouth.

"Tomorrow or the day after—which is it, Mary?" he insisted. "For we're not going to wait months, do you hear? Answer me!"

"You haven't a thing to say, Mr. Sullivan. I'll marry you when I get ready and not a minute sooner."

"You better get ready quick, then, Miss Kelly, or I'll carry you off and you'll know who is boss of this duet."

"I want to ask you something, Pat. Will you tell me the very truth?"

"I couldn't tell you anything else, little pal." He began to laugh. "Don't you know that I stand in awe of your every word?"

"I'm not joking, Pat."

"Neither am I. I wish it was a joke!"

"This is what I want to know—suppose I had gone to Hall Dawson's on purpose and afterwards was sorry and knew that I wanted only you, you wouldn't have come, would you?"

"Does that satisfy you? I love you. No matter what you might do I would find excuses to justify you."

I must have imagined his arm relaxed. It tightened now, his brown hands pressing mine, his lips whispering against my cheek. "If you knew, love, how sweet, how glorious you are to me!"

"You think Dawson did it, Pat?"

So I didn't tell him then. Later when we had gone downtown to dinner at the Adams House, I vowed that I would tell him. We only went to the rather quiet places, taking a table in a far corner.

"Mary, you wanted to marry a millionaire, didn't you?" Pat asked as we waited for our order.

"I hoped to. I think I could grace a queenly estate, don't you?"

"But what if you never do? You haven't shown the slightest interest in my fortunes. Perhaps I'm a pauper."

"You'll not remain one very long. I'll goad you into earning. An avaricious wife will compel you to decorate her fingers with diamonds."

"Where are we going to live, Mary? We're rich, do you realize that?" His gray eyes laughed at me. "We'll build our palace on the top of a hill so that you can look out at the water. Where, Mary? We only have two days to find it, and we have to take time off while you promise to obey me for life. I'd rather be out north near the lake."

There was a lot near Nell's. Once when Pat and I could carry all our wealth in a thimble we had picked out this lot and decided to build a home there.

"Shall we take that place, Mary?" he asked.

"I don't know. Lots cost too much there. You know, Pat——"

"What?"

"Oh, nothing, but I was hoping—you see, it's about dad. Of course, if we're very poor he could stay on with June, but if we have more——"

"You want him to live with us, Mary?"

"Oh, I'd love a place with a big, sunny room for him. Would it make a difference to you if he came? He works, you know! Even if we haven't much, he wouldn't be an expense."

Pat leaned forward, his hands clasped on the table, his face flushing with the vivid youth, the gayety that had first won me.

"I tell you, Mary Kelly, we're rich! You can eat $40,000 worth of sardines right now if you like and what do I care if your father lives with us, if it makes you any happier. Are you going to marry me tomorrow or the next day, sweetness?

"Isn't it funny the difference money makes in a fellow's courage, Mary?" and he added seriously:

I lay back staring at the ceiling. Faces, legion of faces, filed before me, scenes—the cruel tortures of memory. . . . Allan Bruce as I had first seen him, his wonderful yellow eyes holding mine; then—Pat, as he had caught me in his arms, stooping quickly and kissing me.

"Before I sold the carburetor I used to feel that I had an awful gall to want you to marry me; to expect you to put up with hardship. We won't have so much now, but it seems like millions to me. They gave me $40,000 cash and the majority interest in the stock company they formed to put the carburetor over. If it does good, we'll never have to worry.

"If it doesn't——" for a second he put his hand on mine—"would it make much of a difference to you, Mary?"

That seemed to be my opportunity. I was just about to answer that nothing would make any difference—nothing so long as I could be sure of his love once he knew me as I was, and at that instant three men passed our table, one of them speaking.

The next day as I was leaving the building for lunch that voice saluted me again. Hall Dawson was at my side.

If Hall Dawson had been an ugly ghost putting forth menacing hands to put me back into the troubled past I would not have been more alarmed at his sudden appearance before me. I stepped back into the building, and for one swift, panic-held second returned the glance of the magnificent eyes challenging mine. He fell in step with me.

"Don't walk with me, Mr. Dawson. I don't want to hear what you have to say." Without looking at him I doubled my pace, filled with repugnance for the big hulking form looming at my side. In an angry revulsion I faced him.

"Leave me!" I ordered, in a protest. He paid no heed, kept pace with me, speaking in his rapid, hotfire way.

"It's for your own good, Mary. Take my advice. Don't be a fool. The fellow's in wrong already. You'll find out. Steer clear of him. Say, I got a great scheme. Quit him and I'll let you in on it. What do you say, girlie?"

We had reached the corner. I turned quickly. He followed. I dashed across the street.

"Will you leave me, sir, or are you going to force another scene on me? People are watching us." I felt my face flaming with rage; heard my voice coming in hoarse violence.

"I'll leave you, Mary. Listen a minute. That fat-head pulled off a rotten deal in New York. He's crooked as hell. Quit him before it's too late."

I went hurrying on, shaking, furious, tormented, rushing down the street, fearing every moment that he was coming after me.

There was no subtlety, as there was no crudeness he would scorn, to win his end. As I typed briefs that afternoon, imagination took me back to Dawson's office. By 5 o'clock I was so exhausted, so feverish with anxiety I rushed out down the street, half-expecting that I would never see him again.

"Yes, I'm here! I'm here!" he mocked, heaving a great sigh. "But can't stay long. I have to take you home first, Mary, and come back later. I'm going to see some men that are interested in the carburetor. Can you wait a few hours for me.

"Oh, can I! I could wait forever."

Answers to Radio Fans

N. P., Lynn—A variometer may be used with a crystal set in place of the coupler (slide-tuning coil, loose-coupler, etc.), but is of no use anywhere else in such a set. No matter what type of receiving set, aerial should be from 80 to 150 feet long. There is no station 1-AAJ. You probably heard WAAJ, the Eastern Radio Institute, Boston.

Radio Elocution

The need of more highly developed elocution, in broadcasting, is pointed out by Frank La Forge, pianist and well known musical coach, in the current issue of Wireless Age. Mr. La Forge says, "When we have a concert or an opera or a musical comedy, or any entertainment where the one who entertains is visible to the audience, proper voice cultivation is not by any means the only point of importance. The audience can see the singer, it can see the action but in the large measure the American audience has not placed a great amount of importance on the words or the song. In the case of the radio telephone, however, everything except the actual voice is eliminated and for that reason it is highly necessary, in order to give the audience the pleasure it expects, for the singer to have proper diction, in order that every syllable, and I might say every letter of every word, may be audible. Too many singers cannot do this."

Oils and Steels Lead Upswing in Strong New York Market; Money, 5½%

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

The great banking convention in New York, attended by 11,500 delegates, yielded a bigger result than any recorded by newspapers.

It brought thousands of bankers from every state and almost every county in the union into close, intimate contact with one another for the exchange of news and views, with the consequence that it was discovered that the progress already made towards the restoration of prosperity all over the country has been distinctly greater than had been popularly imagined.

America is making a very creditable come back after its period of depression which amounted to prostration.

* * *

* * *

Perhaps of equal importance is the progress that has been made in reaching rational, sensible views concerning conditions and prospects. I interviewed more bankers last week than in any other week of my life, and I was greatly impressed by the sanity, the solidity, the perspective of views expressed, particularly by so-called "country bankers."

Most of them are well satisfied with the recovery already made and are figuring upon continued rational improvement.

* * *

Some time ago I ventured the opinion that the American bond market was about as high as it was likely to go.

I feel more strongly than ever that lower bond prices are much more likely than higher prices.

* * *

Despite the acute uncertainties abroad and the difficulties bequeathed by the railway and coal strikes at home, business, promises to make gradual headway.

U. S. STEEL UP OVER 2 TO NEW YEAR'S HIGH

Oil and steel groups led a sensational upswing in a strong New York market, in which money opened at 4½ and lifted to 5½.

Widespread belief in Wall street that there will be an enormous increase in the unfilled tonnage of the U. S. Steel Corporation, to be published Tuesday, caused active buying of the stock, which advanced 2½ points to 108¼, the best price of the year.

In the oil group there were these gains and new tops for 1922: Standard Oil of New Jersey, 17½ at 246, Houston, 3½ at 91¾; Atlantic Refining, 170 at 1500, and Texas Co., 2⅜ at 52⅛.

Among issues at new year's highs were National Enameling, U. S. Realty, Iron Products, Du Pont, Fisher Body, Gulf States Steel, American Can and North American Company.

American Car & Foundry was up 6⅞, at 194⅞, to a record high for all time. Records were also set by Corn Products and American Locomotive.

Mergenthaler at Year's High in Boston Market

Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway preferred sagged 1½, at 70. The B issue also yielded a point. Greenfield Tap & Die was off 1⅜, at 20½.

Liberties Drop on News of New U. S. Financing

Pronounced weakness in the Liberty 4¼s series and strength of New York Traction issues featured New York dealings in bonds, which were exceptionally heavy.

Announcement of the government's new financing plan was responsible for the heavy selling of Liberties, the first 4¼s dropping 24 points, the second and third, 8 each, and the fourth 26 points. The called Victory 4¾s gained 18 points.

Tractions improved in response to the acceptance of the reorganization plan for the Interborough Consolidated Company by the security holders. The I. R. T. 5s moved up 2 points and the 5s certificates 2½.

GENERAL SETBACK IN WHEAT MARKET

Wheat market in Chicago started upward, but the opening, which varied from unchanged figures to ½c higher, with December 1.07⅞ to 1.08, and May 1.09¼ to 1.09½, was followed by a setback all around to below Saturday's finish.

New long term 4¼ per cent. U. S. $500,000,000 issue bonds sold on the New York Curb on "when issued" basis at $100.50.

Mammoth Oil Company

(Controlled by the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation)

Capital Stock 2,005,000 Shares - No Par Value

Teapot Dome Field
(Wyoming)

The Company has leased from the United States Government 9,321 acres of land known as Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 3 in Wyoming. This property was selected by the United States Government as an Oil Reserve for naval purposes and is being developed for the joint benefit of the United States Government and the Mammoth Oil Co.

The Company, during the past week, brought in a new well flowing from 10,000 barrels to 20,000 barrels of oil per day at a depth of only 1,500 feet. The Company is drilling 20 wells, 9 of which have drilled through oil-bearing sand.

The Salt Creek field, of which this is a part, is capable of producing approximately 150,000 barrels a day from existing wells, which at the present time are running about 60,000 barrels a day. This present production will be materially increased as soon as adequate pipe line and tankage facilities have been provided.

A pipe line is to be built from the Wyoming field, probably by the Sinclair Pipe Line Company, which is owned jointly by the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. There is now being constructed steel tankage which will provide for 1,600,000 barrels of oil.

A limited number of shares of the Mammoth Oil Company will be offered for sale Monday morning, October 9th, 1922. Application has been made to list this stock on the New York Curb Market. Orders for the purchase of these shares should be placed through your own broker.

SINCLAIR GETS GRIP ON SAKHALIEN OIL

Peking dispatch says Sinclair Consolidated has been granted right of prospecting and developing north half of Island of Sakhalien, with oil prospects, for period of five years. Announcement made on authority of Soviet Russian delegation, now in Peking.

Boston Notes

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—In general, do not expect more than two to three point setbacks and reason that this week will probably present the last opportunity before a general advance.

SUBSIDY BILL is believed to have gained strength through the Daugherty liquor ruling. Pacific Mail has been favorite with Boston buyers to benefit by ship subsidy as favored by President Harding.

ARCADIAN CONSOLIDATED has opened fair to good ground in north and south drifts of New Baltic shaft. It is proposed to open this to considerable distance.

WOLFE SEPARATION COMPANY suit against Calumet & Hecla, White Pine and Ahmeek Copper Company is listed for trial in U. S. District Court at Marquette, Mich., at coming term. Fight for royalty payments is basis of litigation.

STANTON MINES, Wolverine and Mohawk continue to reflect improvement in labor situation and increase in output in September will be shown proportionate to that of August over July.

MAYFLOWER formation has been opened to width of seventy feet on the 1,700-foot level of Mayflower-Old Colony and mineralization is quite high, probably better than 25 pounds to the ton.

STREET LIKES Chicago & Eastern Illinois, St. Louis & San Francisco and that stock which the superstitious say always moves with it, St. Louis & Southwestern.

Wall St. Gossip

PRINCE & WHITELY — North American Co., Tide Water Oil, U. S. Steel, Baldwin, National Lead, Pittsburgh Coal, General Electric and Consolidated Gas are in favorable position.

E. F. HUTTON & CO.—We think it reasonable to believe that the general securities market will continue to show fundamental strength.

LIVINGSTON & CO—No change in ultimate trend, but need or caution in making new commitments at this level.

NEW YORK CENTRAL is rumored planning to raise its dividend from 5 to 7 per cent, and issue $50,000,000 new stock, which might be called paying dear for money.

TEXAS CO. has showed recent signs of real move that has been long, long delayed.

MUNDS & WINSLOW—In view of buoyant condition of textile industry and probability even moderate improvement in export demand will take up existing slack in market, we feel time has come to take definite position on long side.

STUDEBAKER directors, many brokers say, are almost certain to declare extra dividend at meeting this month, chief interest lying in size of disbursement supplementing regular $2.50 declaration.

REAL ESTATE HAPPENINGS

The large number of persons who visited the grounds of the Securities Real Estate Trust development in West Roxbury Saturday, despite the unfavorable weather, is indicative of the interest manifested in the ten-day close out sale being conducted by the company. All the remaining lots are being offered for sale at reduced prices. Some lots are located on the car line; others are nearby. The sale is in charge of Mr. Meyer, who will show the lots from his office, No. 235 Grove street, West Roxbury. The property is easily reached from Forest Hills by the "Washington-Grove street" car to the end of the line.

BROKERS WILL DISCUSS LICENSE.

Five-minute talks by prominent brokers from all over the state on whether or not there should be a law requiring the licensing of real estate brokers in this state will be the feature of the Brokers' Dinner of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange to be held at the Hotel Bellevue, Tuesday evening, October 24, at 6 o'clock. Local brokers throughout the state have been invited to attend.

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange has initiated the movement to look into the merits of this question for the benefit of the real estate men of the State, so that if a bill is introduced during the next session of the Legislature, they will know how to act. At the present time there are license laws regulating brokers in fourteen States and the National Association of Real Estate Boards has gone on record in favor of introducing bills in those States where there is no such law at the present time.

It is claimed by the advocates of the law that it will not only raise the standards of the real estate business as a whole, but will serve to protect the public from those alleged real estate dealers whose unscrupulous methods in the past have victimized the public out of large sums.

W. Franklin Burnham, chairman of the Brokers' Board, is chairman of the committee and George A. Hill, executive secretary of the exchange, is secretary, to whom application for tickets should be made.

Unfair Rate Differentials Mean Disaster

The Cunard Steamship Line announces that it is going to remove its service from Boston to Philadelphia immediately if rate differentials between that port and Boston are not immediately corrected.

Do the people of Boston appreciate, do the people of New England, that great hinterland of Boston, appreciate the disaster which this movement portends to New England?

It is only the beginning of a general retreat from Boston and New England ports as if we were dead.

Why is it necessary for us to suffer these humiliations and commercial disaster? Why have we been deprived of rate differentials which our fathers have enjoyed for years in New England? If the rate differentials have been fair all these years before, why aren't they fair now?

Do you want the answer? Let Senator Lodge give you the answer. He represents in this State the dominant party. He represents the party that is responsible for everything that is done to New England by the National Government. If he were half as awake to the legitimate demands of the interests of New England as he is to the demands of the predatory interests for extortionate rates and embargoes, we would have no such pall over us.

Can anyone doubt that William A. Gaston, the Democratic candidate for Senator, understands New England business needs for foreign commerce, and Massachusetts' interests in the port of Boston? Can anyone doubt that Mr. Gaston will protect those interests if he is elected?

Improving the Elevated

Mayor Curley Praises Trustees, but Criticizes Amount Charged to Depreciation

Mayor Curley has renewed his advocacy of the five-cent fare before the Public Utilities Board. He takes occasion to praise the public trustees of our railway system and their public management of this property now in our hands.

The only criticism he makes of their management concerns the amount they set aside to depreciation. It is the same criticism which Mr. MacFarland, attorney for this newspaper, made several years ago when, as a member of a special committee appointed by Mayor Peters to investigate the affairs of the traction system, he filed a minority report suggesting that the public trustees were charging too much to depreciation and undertaking to rebuild the road too fast at a time when labor and materials were very high. The Mayor is probably right, although it is a matter of judgment in which honest differences of opinion may be entertained among intelligent and disinterested men. Of course, the more rapidly you improve the condition of the railway property the more rapidly you reduce the cost of operating it. On the other hand, the more rapidly you build it the more you charge the present with cost which should be spread over a longer period.

The Mayor urged the purchase of the stock of the Elevated by the State at the market price. This would save immediately the public a little more than a million and a half a year. It is quite a saving and on principle a long step in advance.

We join with the Mayor in urging the reduction of the fare to a flat five cents. Although there is no railway which is not in the public hands that does not charge substantially as much as is charged the people of Boston, yet we do not believe that a ten cent fare has ever been accepted anywhere among the people as a final determination.

We are heading toward a five cent fare even without the help of the Legislature, but we may not be able to go the whole distance because there comes a point where the income of the property will not pay its expenses if that income is reduced too much. We want to remember that nearly the whole increase in the car fare above five cents goes to the increased cost of labor, the increased salaries of the motormen and conductors and other employes of the road and an increase which they deserve and which increase ought not to be taken away from them. But the social and economic advance of the community do require a five-cent fare and if we had public ownership of the stock as well as public control and operation of the road, we could ALMOST give a five-cent fare out of the income of the road, if we could not ENTIRELY give it, and the difference could be made up out of taxation.

Bonus Again Indorsed

The women's branch of the American Legion by a unanimous vote has declared in favor of the soldiers' bonus. The American Legion, itself, by a vote substantially unanimous has done the same thing over and over again.

Why, then, the continuous statements that the soldiers do not care about the bonus, but that their demand for it is only politics? Why should not they want only a modest part of what they are entitled to?

Why should not they want a tithe of their desserts from the war profiteers and home-staying labor during the war, which received more than it ever dreamed of getting under peace conditions? Why should the young men who were dragged away from their firesides and businesses to the dangers of war in a foreign land be deprived even of the part of their business losses, to say nothing of compensation for the personal risks which they were obliged to take and the discomforts they suffered? To argue such a proposition makes you angry. It is so one-sided.

There is one consolation, however, and that is that the American people are just and that they are being misrepresented by the present administration and that its life is not long, and the soldiers will soon get their bonus, if they make themselves heard and felt at the next election.

Value of a Railroad

One Liberal Estimate

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, estimating the value of railroads, to decide how much they may charge to pay interest, announces that the "Big Four"—the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad—is worth one hundred and sixty-four millions and a little over. That is about $100,000 for about each mile of main line track, and looks like a generous allowance.

The proposition that monopolies that get all their value from the people—gas companies, railroads, etc., must be allowed to charge enough to make a good profit, no matter what else happens, ought to interest business men. Nobody guarantees THEM a profit, or authorizes them to tax the public on a 6 or 8 per cent. basis.

Put Money in a Home

Editor Boston American:

In answer to L. E. V. whether she should continue working after marriage, is a matter I have been thinking a great deal about lately, and consider it a very serious problem. I am past my youth, but putting myself in your place, I would be puzzled to know just what to do as conditions are so different today than fifteen years ago, when I started on $15.00 a week, bringing up four children now on $25.00 a week, and it certainly means some planning. You know the girls today are commanding as much salary as the men and more, so I think it must be very hard if a girl is used to luxuries, to come down to earth, and get along on $35.00 a week. I personally think the ideal way is to start small, and put any money you save in a home of your own, with a flat or two to let. I think a woman that commands a salary as big as yours must be very clever and you would be a fine success as a home-maker, and provided you are getting a good man, I would say, keep house for him, but don't start too big. M. A. K.

Ku Klux Klan

Editor Boston American:

It is with the utmost pleasure that I note the Ku Klux Klan has come to Boston. Late, but not too late to show all real Americans what America means, to stop this blasphemy and lies about the very founders of our country, to insist that the truths of our history still live Smash them, yes, Mayor Quinn, smash them if you can. I am one who will be only too glad to join them if they will have me. I know your smashes may as well be leveled at a brick wall. B. P. SMITH.

Cambridge.

Live and Let Live

Editor Boston American:

The K. K. K. is to be commended for carrying on its "noble" task! I would like to know what the Klan calls a 100 per cent. American. Cannot a Jew or a Catholic be a good citizen and still believe in his religion? If not, then where does life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness come in?

It is certainly not a good fighter who has to resort to personalities, the calling of nicknames and so forth to strengthen his arguments. I believe the motto, "Live and Let Live" should be given consideration by the K. K. K. R. H. ROUSSIN.

Portland, Me.

Smyrna's Population

Editor Boston American:

Mr. Fallon wants to know where the 300,000 Smyrna refugees come from, that Smyrna's population for the last thirty years is only 190,000. The Turkish census of 1910 shows Smyrna's population to be 375,000. And besides Smyrna's population, where's Brusa's 90,000, Afiun Karahissar's 45,000, Eshi Sekir's 42,860, Kutaia's 34,000? You said the Turk had a right to his own land, having occupied it 700 years before Columbus was born. England has occupied Ireland for more than 800 years, but didn't the Irish people have the right to fight for freedom?

APOSTOLOS HARISOPOULOS.

Not for Patriotism

Editor Boston American:

It is certainly a mark of British patriotism and those of that nationality who wear the war button should not be criticized. But the man who enlisted in the Canadian army long before America went into the World War did so when England was committing open flagrant piracy on our commerce, robbing our mails and in reality blockading our very ports (witness editorial in Boston American which I hold in my hand as I now write). Under such circumstances and in face of such facts it cannot honestly be claimed that Americans entered the fray for the purpose of defending or fighting for America. B. B.

Sentinels of the Republic

Editor Boston American:

Permit me, in fairness, to give the reasons for my objections at the Samuel Adams Day "mock town meeting," so called, at Faneuil Hall, when I was, as you said, in a "tiff" with Moderator Louis A. Coolidge and others of the "Sentinels of the Republic."

I was unwilling to follow or accept the resolutions of the "Sentinels" without open discussion when I beheld the incorporators were men of the shoe machinery, oil, fish and other industrial trusts.

One of the resolutions which I opposed was this:

Would such lawyers as Herbert Parker or Henry Hurlburt be willing to accept such an important resolution without debate or without knowledge of it? Not much, not much, Mr. Editor.

What does the resolution mean? Was it set forth to preserve the horrors of child labor? Is it to strangle the desire for unity between capital and labor by keeping the activities of our government from working out great measures of social justice for the common good? Is it an attempt to make our government's soul into a miserable shekel and not of God—preventing, if possible, the working out of the great general welfare clause of our Constitution for the noble advancement of our people?

These are some of questions which came to me when I beheld the "Sentinels" at work

Employment Agencies

Editor Boston American:

Repeated attempts of our citizens to do away with "your first week's wages" extortion by Boston "employment" agencies, has met with nothing but ribald laughter and scorn! Is this State so far behind New York and others? Surely the "pepul's friends" now weeping on street corners and begging votes have changed their opinion about this form of chattel slavery.

In Actual Need

Editor Boston American:

I have eight children and am in actual need. I would be thankful for a pair of crutches for my oldest boy and a baby carriage for my youngest.

MRS. P. H.

Editor Boston American:

If any of your readers have a baby carriage I would very much appreciate it, as I have an infant child and am without means of obtaining one. ROSLINDALE.

Editor Boston American:

I am a mother of a young child and expect another soon and I really can't afford a new carriage. I am wondering if some kind reader has one that is tucked away in their attic and of no use. MRS. H. W. L.

ED NOTE—A pair of crutches has been given Mrs. P. H. Many requests for baby carriages are coming in. Have any other readers some which they can spare to needy mothers?

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

If today is your birthday, you should be determined and perserving in all you undertake, because you are naturally courageous. You think clearly and fearlessly; you know what you want to do; and you proceed toward the accomplishment of your ambition, no matter what sacrifices and hardship it may involve.

A child born today will be restless, energetic and extremely impressionable and should be treated with sympathy and affection.

FAMOUS PERSONS BORN THIS DAY:

Pierre Choteau—One of the founders of St. Louis.

Fridtjof Nansen—Arctic explorer.

Paul Kruger—Last President of the Transvaal.

John J. Stevenson—Geologist.

IS THERE A UNITY OF INTEREST IN YOUR HOME?

Perhaps you are finding in your home life, as you grow older, that you and your life partner are drifting apart in what you like and enjoy.

Each of you is becoming more set in what you will or you won't do.

It should not exist, for it will ruin the happiness of home and take away the finer sentiment which should exist between husband and wife.

Are you willing to go half way to change this condition?

It is not fair to expect either one to give up all of his or her ideas in favor of the other, that one may have everything he or she desires.

You may be blaming your wife because she does not sympathize with your kind of sport, and perhaps the truth of the matter is she realizes that it is too expensive for the whole family to enjoy and thus she resents it.

SEEN AND HEARD

An interesting reminder of the old days in fire fighting history is contained in a case in the office of Fire Chief John O. Taber. It is a miniature hand tub, designed, constructed and presented to the Boston Fire Department in 1856 by a fire company of Philadelphia. Protected from the dust, it is as shiny and new-looking as it was sixty-five years ago when it was given the city. "It's a far cry from the big, modern pumps," remarks Chief Taber.

Ninety thousand persons have passed into cells at the East Cambridge jail since the regime there of SHERIFF FAIRBAIRN, which began twenty-six years ago last June. In the rather gruesome case which adorns the Sheriff's office is a collection of letters and pictures of many celebrities who have passed on, via the hangman's noose or the electric chair. CHARLES L. TUCKER'S photograph occupies a place of prominence in the collection. And there is the noose that enveloped the neck of the last unlucky individual to "go out" that way in Massachusetts.

CHARLES C. KOLSTER, radio inspector for this district, is as busy these days as the traffic cop at Washington and Summer streets during the rush hours. Besides his regular duties of supervising all the radio transmitting stations in New England, both ship and land, amateur and commercial, the genial inspector is now trying to bring order out of the broadcasting chaos.

VICE-PRESIDENT W. IRVING BULLARD of the Merchants' National Bank, visited thirteen European countries last year, including Russia, in sixty days of real travel, part of it along the air routes. Now he is on his way to Rio de Janeiro, representing many commissions for the centennial of Brazil's freedom.

EDWIN M. D'ARCY, well-known Boston interior decorator, is a firm believer in the "great outdoors." All Summer long finds MR. D'ARCY at his camp out in Sudbury and those fortunate enough to be his guests testify that he can't be beat when it comes to cooking a real meal.

PAUL BOWSER, the well known wrestling promoter and star, has blossomed right out as a horse owner, and according to advices from Brockton has a very promising string of thoroughbreds.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON THE HORIZON

By Garrett P. Serviss

"'A' and 'B' appeal to you to settle a dispute about the horizon. 'A' affirms as follows: (1) On a sea level the horizon is the imaginary line which apparently makes the sky touch the distant sea, owing to the shape of the earth. (2) That irrespective of one's strength of eyesight the horizon is always equally far distant on sea level, and the farther you move from the surface of the earth the horizon becomes bigger. (3) That the horizon from a ship's deck is about fifteen miles distant. (4) That any apparent change of distance on the horizon is a matter of optical illusion or peculiarity of one's eyesight. (5) That the horizon on sea level is equal in its length in all directions, thus making the surface appear a round table. (6) That the horizon is the same on any given observation point for all persons irrespective of different strength of eyesight.

"'B' affirms that, depending on one's eyesight, the horizon is different for each observer; hence the above six points are wrong.

"'A' rejoins that what 'B' states is vision and not horizon.—B. Marx, Brooklyn."

It is very important for everybody to have sound views about the horizon. But it is a mistake to assume that such views are by any means universally entertained. The man who spoke disrespectfully of the equator was no worse than the one who thinks he is under no obligation to understand the horizon.

If Mr. "B's" views as expressed above were sound, astronomy and navigation would be uncertain sciences. Suppose the horizon to approach or recede according to the "strength" of the observer's eyesight, then no one could go safely to sea, for ships' officers would never agree in their observations and reckonings.

Of course, the vision must be clear and not obscured, but the horizon does not change its distance with difference of "length of sight."

Furthermore, it is a fact that the visible horizon does not correspond exactly with the mathematical horizon, owing to the refraction of light by the atmosphere, which increases the distance of the horizon beyond its theoretical limit.

It is well to keep in mind the fact that there are three senses in which the word horizon may be employed. First, we have the "visible" horizon, which is not the same on land as at sea, because the irregularities of elevation on land cause the outline of the circle where sky and earth meet to undulate up and down.

The other form of the visible horizon, sometimes called the "sensible" horizon, is that at sea, which is used for all scientific purposes where direct observation of the horizon is employed. It is equally distant from the observer in all directions. But the actual distance changes somewhat with the refraction.

The third sense in which the word horizon is used is that of the "rational" horizon, astronomical conception, according to which the horizontal plane passes through the centre of the earth, parallel with the sensible horizon.

Milk Baths Are Good for the Complexion, But the Necks of the Bottles Are Too Narrow to Get Into

A well known doctor has come out with the statement that milk baths are good for the complexion. Maybe they are, but the necks of the bottles are so narrow we can't get in them.

A famous stage star claims that cream has made her face sweet and beautiful. If this is true then a lot of dames must use buttermilk.

The same doctor also says that butter will make the face smooth. The majority of us can't get butter on our face, we have to pay cash.

A woman who massages her face with milk and butter won't have to wait long before she'll have a nice batch of cheese on her forehead.

They say that milk and butter are wonderful for the face, and maybe they are, but whenever you see a dame with a beautiful complexion you won't know whether she got it at a beauty parlor or a dairy.

You don't have to use any water at all. The average quart of milk has plenty of water in it.

Instead of Little Willie asking his mother to pass the butter, he'll take the piece of bread and rub it on sister's cheek.

By paying a little more you can get first class milk and have a certified complexion.
